Contents

Figures and Tables .............................................. ix
Abbreviations ....................................................... xiii
Acknowledgements .................................................. xv

Part 1: The Research of Willingness to Communicate in a Second Language .................................................. 1

1 Introduction ..................................................... 3
   English Language Teaching in China ......................... 4
   Overview of the Research .................................... 5
   Methodological Framework .................................. 7
   Organisation of the Book .................................... 9

2 Hybrid Perspectives on WTC in an L2 ......................... 11
   L2 WTC Research Situated in Second Language Acquisition Landscape .......... 11
   A Cultural Perspective on L2 WTC ......................... 28
   An Ecological Perspective on L2 WTC ...................... 32
   Summary ....................................................... 37

Part 2: The Big Picture: Interrelationships between WTC, Communication Confidence, Motivation, Learner Beliefs and Classroom Environment (Phase 1: Questionnaire Survey) ......................... 39

3 Dimensions of WTC, Confidence, Motivation, Beliefs and Classroom Environment ................. 41
   Instrumentation Preparation: A Pilot Study .................... 41
   Participants and Research Context ........................... 45
Profiles of Participants’ WTC in English in the Language Classroom 48
An Introduction to Structural Equation Modelling 52
Modelling the Many Facets of WTC, Confidence, Motivation, Beliefs and Classroom Environment 55
Model Reliability and Validity 68
Summary 70

4 Interrelationships between WTC, Confidence, Motivation, Beliefs and Environment on WTC: A Full Structural Model 72
   A Model of WTC and its Antecedents 72
   Interrelationships between WTC, Confidence, Motivation, Beliefs and Environment 82
   Summary 91

Part 3: A Situated Lens: WTC Fluctuations over Time and Across Classroom Situations
(Phase 2: A Multiple-Case Study) 93

5 Four Cases and their WTC Fluctuations 95
   The Multiple-Case Study 95
   Establishing Trustworthiness 97
   The Four Focal Students and Their English Language Class 98
   Weitao: ‘I’m Still Studying English for Examinations’ 103
   Dongmei: ‘The Class is Like Backwater’ 107
   Zefeng: ‘Group Discussion is of No Use At All’ 110
   Developmental Nature of WTC in EFL Classrooms 114
   Summary 115

6 Distal and Proximal Influences on WTC Fluctuations 116
   Learner Beliefs and Motivations as Distal Individual Context 118
   Cognitive, Linguistic and Affective Factors as Proximal Individual Context 125
   Classroom Environment as Situational Social Context 134
   Frequency Count across Cases 139
   Summary 142
Part 4: Blending ‘Apple Juice’ and ‘Orange Juice’
Integration of Overall Findings

7 WTC Inside the Language Classroom and Beyond
   Integration of Overall Findings
   An Ecological Interpretation of WTC in the EFL Classroom
   Situated Conceptualisation of WTC in the EFL Classroom
   Summary

8 Concluding Remarks
   Overall Findings
   Theoretical Implications
   Methodological Implications
   Implications for Educational Practice
   Future Research

Appendix 1: Factor Loadings
Appendix 2: Questionnaire
Appendix 3: Correlation Matrix for the Structural Model
Appendix 4: Interview Guide
Appendix 5: Classroom Observation Scheme
Appendix 6: Learning Journal Framework
Appendix 7: Coding Scheme
References
Index