Acknowledgements

We would like to acknowledge the wide range of people who have helped us in the process of completing this book project. We would like first and foremost to thank all the teachers, parents and children involved in the research for this book’s case studies. Without their openness and participation, we would not have been able to investigate firsthand the effects that South Korean language classrooms can have on early childhood anxiety.

We would also like to give a special acknowledgement to children’s counselor NanDee Walker, NCC, LPC, RPT for her consultations on therapeutic interventions for childhood anxiety, as well as to counseling psychologist Dr Ka Yan Danise Mok for her insights into adult anxiety and its manifestations.

Additionally, we would like to thank Dr Sujeong Kang for helping us collect and analyze the data from the many kindergartens, and Sangeun Lee for organizing the data and helping to correct the manuscript.

Our gratitude goes out to Amena Nebres for all of her editorial help, as well as to Toby Bladen for his helpful edits and suggestions on the earlier drafts of this manuscript. Furthermore, we would like to express gratitude to all of the reviewers, editors, copyeditors, and others who looked over the manuscripts and offered invaluable suggestions for its improvement during the publication process, especially Laura Longworth whose patience was endless and whose help was invaluable.

Finally, above all, we would like to thank our families and friends for all their support, love and encouragement throughout this process. Thank you Ian, Sarah and Jessie. Thank you Garett and Aelwyn. Thank you Alex and Daniel.
