This book is the concluding publication of a five-year international research project (2014–2019) supported by a JSPS (Japan Society for the Promotion of Science) grant titled ‘International Comparative Research on the Spreading and Reception of Culture through Contents Tourism’ (Kiban A, grant number 26243007, grant period 2014–2019, project co-leaders Philip Seaton and Takayoshi Yamamura). This research would not have been possible without the generous financial support of JSPS and all the practical support given by the administrative staff at Hokkaido University and Tokyo University of Foreign Studies, who have helped us manage the grant.

The papers for this edited volume were first presented at the International Symposium ‘Transnational Contents Tourism in Europe and Asia’ held at Tokyo University of Foreign Studies on 7–10 June 2018. We would like to thank all the symposium attendees, both those whose work is included in this book and those who are publishing their research elsewhere. However, we would like to extend particular thanks to Professor Sue Beeton, President of TTRA, whose support, friendship and encouragement have meant so much to us during the contents tourism project ever since we started working together in 2011.

Throughout the project, many people have provided us with valuable information, suggestions and advice. In particular, we would like to express our sincere gratitude to Nelson H.H. Graburn, Professor Emeritus in Sociocultural Anthropology at the University of California, Berkeley, for his warm and long-standing academic support. In particular, it was a great honour to present our research at an international conference that he organized, ‘Contents Tourism: Creativity, Fandom, Neo-Destinations’, which was held in the Department of Anthropology, University of California, Berkeley, 10–11 March 2017. We would also like to extend our appreciation to Dean MacCannell, Professor Emeritus in Environmental Design, University of California, Davis, for his invaluable insights expressed at the conference. Philip Seaton thanks Dr Karl Ian U. Cheng Chua for his kind invitation to give a keynote lecture at Ateneo de Manila University, the Philippines, in February 2018, at which first drafts of many of the ideas in the conclusions were presented, and also to Dr Helen Macnaughtan and SOAS, University of London, for the invitation to give the W.G. Beasley Memorial Lecture in March 2019 on the research presented in this book.

Our concept of contents tourism has also been inspired by and developed through discussions with colleagues and students at several conferences, institutions and classes, including TTRA Apac (Travel and Tourism Research Association, Asia Pacific Chapter), BAJs (British Association for Japanese Studies), EAJs (European Association for Japanese Studies), AAA (American Anthropological Association), Institute of Japan Studies (Tokyo University of Foreign Studies), MJSP (Modern Japanese Studies Program, Hokkaido University) and IMCTS (Graduate School of International Media, Communication and Tourism Studies, Hokkaido University). We deeply appreciate their warm friendship, academic support and feedback. There are so many other persons and organizations we have to thank. We have acknowledged them in the text where appropriate.

Finally, we thank all the staff at Channel View Publications for their help and support throughout the whole process of reviewing, editing and publishing. We have done our best to ensure an error-free volume, but any remaining errors are the responsibility of the authors and editors.

Note on names: All names are written in the order given name followed by family name in the text, regardless of their nationalities (however, in citations, the order is as in the original). Macrons indicate long vowel sounds in Japanese names and words.
