CANADIAN ISLAMIC SCHOOLS

Unravelling the Politics of Faith,
Gender, Knowledge, and Identity

Religious schooling in Canada has been the subject of considerable political and academic interest, yet there has been little scholarship on Islamic education. In this ethnographic study of four full-time Islamic schools, Jasmin Zine explores the social, pedagogical, and ideological functions of these alternative, religiously based educational institutions. Based on eighteen months of fieldwork and interviews with forty-nine participants, Canadian Islamic Schools provides insight into the role and function that Islamic schools have in diasporic, educational, and gender-related contexts.

Discussing issues of cultural preservation, multiculturalism, secularization, and assimilation, Zine considers pertinent topics such as the Eurocentricism of Canada's public schools and the social reproduction of Islamic identity. She further examines the politics of piety, veiling, and gender segregation, paying particular attention to the ways in which gendered identities are constructed within the practices of Islamic schools and how these narratives shape and inform the negotiation of gender roles among both boys and girls.

A fascinating and informative study of religious-based education, Canadian Islamic Schools is essential reading for educators, sociologists, and those interested in immigration and diaspora studies.

JASMIN ZINE is an associate professor in the Department of Sociology at Wilfrid Laurier University.
