REMAKING POLICY

Scale, Pace, and Political Strategy in Health Care Reform

One of the most persistent puzzles in comparative public policy concerns the conditions under which discontinuous policy change occurs. In Remaking Policy, Carolyn Hughes Tuohy advances an ambitious new approach to understanding the relationship between political context and policy change.

Focusing on health care policy, Tuohy argues for a more nuanced conception of the dynamics of policy change, one that makes two key distinctions regarding the opportunities for change and the magnitude of such changes. Four possible strategies emerge: large-scale and fast-paced (“big bang”), large-scale and slow-paced (“blueprint”), small-scale and rapid (“mosaic”), and small-scale and gradual (“incremental”). As Tuohy demonstrates, these strategies are determined not by conditions themselves, but by the ways in which political actors, individually and collectively, assess their prospects for success in the present and over time.

Drawing on interviews as well as primary and secondary accounts of ten cases of major change in health policy over seven decades (1945–2015) in the US, the UK, the Netherlands, and Canada, Remaking Policy represents a bold step towards understanding the scale and pace of change in health policy and beyond.
