This volume is the first publication to appear under the banner of the Oecologies research cluster. We wish to express our deep gratitude to colleagues at Simon Fraser University and the University of British Columbia who embarked on this journey with us during a working lunch funded by the Peter Wall Institute for Advanced Studies in 2013. Many of the essays in this volume had their first airing in a conference convened in Vancouver in October 2015 called “Oecologies: Engaging the World, from Here.” We thank the organizations that funded this conference: the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada’s Connection Grant, SFU’s Department of English and the Faculty of Arts and Sciences; and UBC’s Department of English, Faculty of Arts, the Hampton Research Fund, and the Office of the Vice President Research. We extend our gratitude to the speakers and moderators who made this conference such a success, especially Elder Ethel of the Stelómethet tribe for welcoming our participants to the unceded territory of the Coast Salish peoples, and our undergraduate and graduate research assistants, without whom organizing this event would have been impossible: Nathan Szymanski and Mariella Ocampo. We also wish to acknowledge and thank Bertrand W. Delacourt for designing the posters and for being on standby for aesthetic decisions. We are grateful to Suzanne Rancourt, our editor at the University of Toronto Press, who has guided this project with a sure hand, and to the two anonymous readers who commented on the manuscript. Alexander Cosh and Nathan Szymanski have been invaluable research assistants, helping us to put the manuscript together and obtain images and permissions. We also acknowledge the financial support of SSHRC’s Insight Grant program.
Vin Nardizzi would like to thank Gregory Mackie for his incalculably generous support and Tiffany Jo Werth for her enduring friendship and intellectual partnership.

Tiffany Jo Werth would like to thank John Craig, once SFU Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences Dean and ever-passionate Reformation scholar, for his enthusiasm and support for the conference that inspired this volume. In addition, she wishes to thank Bertrand W. Delacourt for his patience, vision, and always-opinionated advice. She also offers a conspiratorial wink to Vin Nardizzi, for without his vegetal wit and good fellowship the labour of creating this volume would have been much more dull.
