ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We dedicate this book to our teachers, supervisors, colleagues, collaborators, and students, who have taught, guided, inspired, and challenged us throughout our careers. We owe a special debt of gratitude to the Indigenous communities, Elders, and knowledge keepers who have trusted us to collaboratively explore their history, and who have changed the way we view the past. To our families, friends, and loved ones, we owe more than is possible to describe in the space an acknowledgement allows.

We thank the Canadian Museum of History, the University of New Brunswick, the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada, the Harrison McCain Foundation, the Busted Publication Fund, and the University of Toronto Press for supporting the writing and publication of this book. Erin Ingram drew the detailed illustrations, and Mallory Moran and Alexander Honsinger produced the numerous maps. Those who provided images are too numerous to recount by name here, but all deserve special thanks and are credited in the text. Others generously shared their research and thoughts. Of these, Arthur Anderson, David Black, Bruce Bourque, Kenneth Holyoke, Tobias Hrynick, Karen Ryan, Donald Soctomah, and Arthur Spiess read and provided comments on full chapter drafts. Several anonymous peer reviewers provided detailed and valuable comments that improved this book.

Carli Hansen and Robin Studniberg (editors) provided limitless patience and encouragement while we wrote and revised the draft, and Emma Warnken Johnson (copy editor) and Judith Earnshaw (proofreader) took on the challenging task of refining our prose.
