ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I remain deeply indebted to a number of people who have made this work possible. My parents’ love, support, and instruction shaped my life. I will be forever grateful for their tireless efforts to raise me well. Having done so, they continued to care for me through the ebbs and flows of life. Their example remains carved on my heart.

My graduate education may never have been if not for my great-aunt, Ruth Kocher. Her love and care made it possible for me to move away and study. As a not-so-young man, I left the northeast and headed south, where my continued education was molded by faithful men. They taught me to think critically and theologically. My conversations with Dr. Douglas K. Blount, Dr. Nathan D. Holsteen, and Dr. Michael J. Svigel shaped me greatly. I am grateful for the hours they have invested in me.

I have been honored to have such a distinguished and valuable dissertation committee. During my PhD studies, I was blessed with the chance to get to know Dr. D. Jeffrey Bingham. Consistently pushing me to improve my work and thought, he has been a devoted teacher of both life and scholarship to me. While God led him north and then back south again, Dr. Bingham continued to shepherd and guide me through my dissertation journey and its shift into this book. Discussions with Dr. Glenn R. Kreider over the years offered fruitful contemplation and reflection for both my studies and life. He has helped me and my work through his loving honesty. I remain elated that Father Irenei agreed to serve on my dissertation committee. His insights and scholarship enriched both me and my study of Irenaeus. His critiques and encouragement have motivated my work and refined this product.
No words can capture the fullness of my gratitude to and for my wife Heather. She has been a steadfast partner through life and during this process. As life has thrown turmoil after turmoil at us we have endured by the grace of God. Without her I may not have weathered the storms of life. Her loving patience and constant support enabled me to devote the necessary time to this project. She has taught me more than she knows and makes my dreams a reality.

Without the faithfulness of these people, this book would not have become reality. I am forever grateful. I am also thankful for the Cadbury Research Library and the University of Birmingham in allowing me to access the Papers of John Hick. These were invaluable to my project and offered a fascinating window into the life and mind of John Hick. My time at the library was enhanced by its friendly and helpful staff. They tirelessly answered my questions and retrieved box after box for me. Yet above these I mentioned, and indeed with them, I thank God our Creator. May we all be his faithful servants.
