

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book grew out of our love of Margaret Atwood, and so we want to begin by expressing our gratitude to the people who introduced us to Atwood: Peter's sisters Ellen Sabo, Maria Sabo, and Annette Sabo, and Rhiannon's mother Jessica Crist. In our own field of biblical studies, we were inspired to pursue this project by Richard Walsh and Jay Twomey's volume on Borges and the Bible (Sheffield 2015). Our friends and colleagues in the Reading, Theory, and the Bible group encouraged us from the beginning; many thanks to Robert Paul Seesengood, Jay Twomey, Jennifer Koosed, Christopher Meredith, and Hannah Strømmen. Many of the papers included in this volume were first presented at a Reading, Theory, and the Bible session at the SBL Annual Meeting in 2018, and we are grateful to both the participants and the audience members for their engagement, and for encouraging this project. We also want to express special thanks to the team at Gorgias Press, for all their help throughout this process.

Rhiannon would also like to thank Kurt Beals, Jessica Crist, Raphael Graybill, Turner Graybill, Judith Haas, Caki Wilkinson, and her wonderful colleagues in the Religious Studies Department and Gender and Sexuality Studies Program at Rhodes College. Rhodes students have also been an encouragement and an inspiration throughout this process, with special thanks to my students in Feminist Biblical Interpretation, who engaged Atwood with enthusiasm and insight. Rhodes College and the Provost's Office provided a sabbatical, which was immensely helpful in completing the volume. The W.J. Millard Professorship provided additional financial support.

Peter would like to thank Ellen Sabo and Tegan Zimmerman for their editing help, as well as the many discussions shared about Atwood and her writings. Without Ellen, I could never finish a paper.

Tegan helped organize a panel on intersectionality and feminist writers in which I participated that gave me much to think about concerning Atwood and issues of intersectionality. I also would like to thank Amir Khadem and Ian Wilson for their willingness to discuss anything related to the academic world, but especially their discussions about literature. My cousin Scott Sabo was also a valuable dialogue partner throughout this project and others. I am likewise grateful for the encouragement and help from Francis Landy (my Doktorvater). Finally, special thanks to the Religious Studies department at the University of Alberta, the financial help of the Belzberg Lecturer position, and all my students.
