ABSTRACT

This brief article gives the Syriac text, with English translation, of the certificate of episcopal consecration given to Mar Julius Alvares, a Roman Catholic priest who joined the Syrian Orthodox Church in 1894. The text is compared with the alleged certificate of episcopal consecration given to Joseph René Vilatte, another convert, who was later excommunicated from the said Church.

- [1] In the summer of 2001, two late nineteenth-century documents were brought to my attention. The first one is a letter dated Feb 10, 1894¹ from Matthew Konat (1860-1927), known in Syrian Orthodox circles as the Malphono of Malabar/Malankara, to his

Patriarch Peter III/IV² in Mardin. The second document, the subject of this brief paper, contains the text of an original copy of the certificate of consecration given to Antonio Francisco Xavier Alvares,³ a Roman Catholic priest who joined the Syrian Orthodox Church and was consecrated metropolitan—Mor Julius, bishop of Ceylon, Goa and India excluding Malabar. This original copy was sent to Patriarch Peter in Mardin for the Patriarchal records. Both documents once belonged to the Patriarchal archive located in the Church of the Forty Martyrs in Mardin.⁴

[2] A cursory Internet search on “Julius Alvares” gives numerous pages. Hardly anything is mentioned about Alvares in these pages; he is simply listed in a line of succession of the Patriarchs of Antioch, beginning with St. Peter and ending with one episcopus vagans or another. Such episcopi vagantes claim titles like ‘patriarch,’ ‘catholicos,’ ‘metropolitan,’ etc., sometimes in combination (e.g., one Joseph Vredenburg of Saint Thomas Christian Church, not to be confused with the Mar Thoma Church of Kerala, claims the title “Maran Mar Timotheus Josephus Narsi, Catholicos Patriarch.”)⁵

[3] While the consecration of Alvares to the episcopate cannot be challenged, his connection with the line of succession of such ‘wandering bishops’ is due to his involvement in bringing one Joseph René Vilatte to the fold of the Syrian church and in having him consecrated, also within the bounds of canon law, to the episcopate in 1892 in Colombo. It was Alvares, together with Mar Athanasius Paulos (d. 1907), Bishop of Kottayam, and Mar Gregorius Gewargis (d. 1902), Bishop of Niranam (and later of Thumpamon), who consecrated Vilatte in 1892 and named him “Mar Timotheos, Metropolitan of North America,” most probably with the blessings of Patriarch Peter. Later, Vilatte took it upon himself to single-handedly consecrate other bishops, contrary to canon law, which resulted in his excommunication from the Syrian Orthodox Church. The bishops consecrated by Vilatte themselves started consecrating other bishops. Already in 1964, over 25 churches in America, Europe and Africa claimed the Vilatte succession.⁶

³ For a biography of Alvares, see Carmo Azevedo, Patriot & Saint: The Life Story of Father Alvares/Bishop Mar Julius I (Panjim: 1988).

- [4] Vilatte and his successors have always been challenged by Rome and Canterbury (as well as by the Episcopal Church in America) to produce the bull of Patriarch Peter sanctioning the consecration, and the certificate of consecration given to Vilatte in their original Syriac form. Vilatte's successors have only been able to produce alleged English translations of both documents. A note given by Patriarch Afram I Barsoum to Mor Athanasius Yesu Samuel upon his departure to the United States as Patriarchal Legate in 1949, in which Barsoum gives instructions and advice to his legate, states that Vilatte had lost his Syriac certificate. (Earlier, on December 10, 1938, Patriarch Barsoum, probably at the request of the Church of England, issued a statement in which he denied any relation with all schismatic bodies of the Vilatte line.⁷)

- [5] The discovery of the certificate of consecration given to Alvares sheds some light on what the original Syriac of Vilatte's certificate may have looked like. In what follows, I give the Syriac text of the certificate of Alvares. I then give my English translation of the same, aligning it vertically with the published text of the English translation of the Vilatte certificate.⁸ The translation has been divided into numbered sections (in curly brackets, { }) for ease of comparison. The reader will note much parallelism in the sequence of the text, as well as similarities in phraseology.
