

LANDSCAPES OF ACTIVISM

Medical Anthropology: Health, Inequality, and Social Justice

Series editor: Lenore Manderson

Books in the Medical Anthropology series are concerned with social patterns of and social responses to ill health, disease, and suffering, and how social exclusion and social justice shape health and healing outcomes. The series is designed to reflect the diversity of contemporary medical anthropological research and writing and will offer scholars a forum to publish work that showcases the theoretical sophistication, methodological soundness, and ethnographic richness of the field.

Books in the series may include studies on the organization and movement of peoples, technologies, and treatments; how inequalities pattern access to these; and how individuals, communities, and states respond to various assaults on well-being, including from illness, disaster, and violence.

I am enormously grateful to all who helped this book happen, from friends in the field, to mentors in the academy, to family (and new friends) who convalesced me back to health upon my return home.

To Anne, Merritt, Bill, David, Andrea, James, Cris, Taz, Rowenn, Michael, Kristin, Sean, Brandt, Heather, Judy, Leo, Carlitos, Januário, Falume, António, Chila, and Fátima, none of this was possible without you.

(I learned from conducting ethnography in Africa)
"The writer should never be ashamed of staring. There is nothing that does not require his attention."
–Flannery O'Connor

I was raised in a matrilineal tribe, and so . . .

(I learned from Mom and Nan)
"You are never too old to set another goal or to dream a new dream."
–C. S. Lewis

(I learned from my Aunt)
"Contrariwise, if it was so, it might be; and if it were so, it would be; but as it isn't, it ain't. That's logic."
–Lewis Carroll

If you're reading this, I thank you too for your time and energy.
