

CONTENTS

BOOK II (CONTINUED)

XIII.	Of judging the Death of Others	3
XIV.	How our Mind is hindered by itself	10
XV.	That Desire is increased in us by Difficulty	12
XVI.	Of Fame	19
XVII.	Of Presumption	36
XVIII.	Of giving the Lie	76
XIX.	Of Liberty of Conscience	82
XX.	We have no experience of any simple thing	87
XXI.	Against Slothfulness	91
XXII.	Of Posting	97
XXIII.	Of Bad Means employed for a Good End	99
XXIV.	Of the Roman Grandeur	103
XXV.	Of not counterfeiting Sickness	106
XXVI.	Of Thumbs	109
XXVII.	Cowardice the Mother of Cruelty	111
XXVIII.	All things have their season	122
XXIX.	Of Vigour	125
XXX.	Of a Child Monster	134
XXXI.	Of Anger	136
XXXII.	Defence of Seneca and Plutarch	145
XXXIII.	The Story of Spurina	153
XXXIV.	Observations on Julius Cæsar's Methods of making War	162
XXXV.	Of Three Good Women	174
XXXVI.	Of the Most Eminent Men	183
XXXVII.	Of the Resemblance of Children to their Fathers	193

BOOK III

I. Of the Useful and the Honourable	233
II. Of Repenting	254
III. Of three sorts of Intercourse	271
IV. Of Distraction	286