Notes on contributors

Elham Amini is Lecturer in Sociology at the University of Liverpool, UK, and the co-leader of the Publics and Practices research cluster. Her research focuses on the gendered and sexual experiences of Iranian Muslim menopausal women through a life history biographical narrative approach. By highlighting menopause, ageing, notions of the body and medicalisation in relation to sexuality and gender, she articulates women’s understanding of and from their menopausal bodies.

Jasneek Chawla is a Paediatric Respiratory and Sleep Medicine Specialist at the Queensland Children’s Hospital, Brisbane, Australia, and an Associate Professor with the Child Health Research Centre and Clinical Unit, Faculty of Medicine, University of Queensland. Associate Professor Chawla is actively involved in clinical research, and leads the paediatric sleep medicine research group in Brisbane. Her areas of interest include sleep in children with disabilities and the development of novel measurement tools for respiratory and sleep evaluation in infants and children. She is a board member for the Australasian Sleep Association, in the role of Education Chair and Deputy Chair of the Annual Conference Committee. She is also an executive board member for the International Paediatric Sleep Association.

Laetitia Coles is a researcher at the University of Queensland, Brisbane, Australia. She is a mixed-methods sociologist, with expertise in how gender shapes parents’ work and care experiences. Laetitia has worked in multidisciplinary teams across a broad range of programme areas, focusing on the experiences of sleep within families, experiences with the medical system among families of children with a disability, and gender dynamics within the early childhood education and care sector. Laetitia is interested in research translation, including the ways in which ‘departing radically from academic writing’ (DRAW) methods can facilitate this translation.

Emma Cooke is Postdoctoral Research Fellow in the Child Health Research Centre at the University of Queensland, Brisbane, Australia. She is a sociologist with expertise in qualitative research and DRAW (‘departing radically in academic writing’), and works in interdisciplinary teams. Dr Cooke researches the lived experiences of children, educators and families, and is particularly interested in relaxation, sleep, gender and wellbeing.

Joan Cronin is Lecturer in the Department of Sociology and Criminology at University College Cork, Ireland. She previously served as Head of Research with AONTAS, Ireland’s National Adult Learning Organisation.
Her current research projects explore gender matters: women’s lives and experiences in the criminal justice system and education for female relatives of prisoner’s and ex-prisoners.

Rosemary Crosse holds a Doctorate in Sociology and a BA in Political Science, Sociology and Psychology from the National University of Ireland, Galway. Her research interests include gender inequality, with an emphasis on structural inequalities and the possible paradoxical effects that social policy may have on women, and a particular interest in those parenting alone.

Katarzyna Gajek is social pedagogue, a Doctor of Humanities in the discipline of Education, and an Assistant Professor at the Department of Social Pedagogy and Social Rehabilitation, University of Łódź, Poland. Her research areas include gender studies, the phenomenon of violence (domestic violence, bullying and human trafficking), social exclusion and empowerment processes, and qualitative research methods, especially biographical methods and discourse analysis.

Fibian Lukalo is Kenya Country Director for Landesa, an international non-governmental organisation that works on improving the tenure security of vulnerable rural communities throughout the world. Fibian is the former Director for Research at the National Lands Commission, Kenya. She received her PhD in Sociology of Education and Gender in 2010 from the University of Cambridge, UK. She has held numerous fellowships, including the Vera Campbell Fellowship at the School for Advanced Research at Santa Fe, New Mexico, USA, the Nordic African Institute in Uppsala, Sweden, and the CODESRIA Gender Institute in Senegal. Fibian holds a Diploma from Columbia Law School & the Earth Institute (USA) on Extractives and Sustainable Development.

Claudia Malacrida is Professor of Sociology (Emerita) and a former Board of Governors Research Chair in Sociology at the University of Lethbridge, Canada. Her research has focused on the power relations embedded in motherhood, disability, institutionalisation and childbirth. She is the author of several books on disability, health and the body, including ‘Mourning the Dreams: Miscarriage, Stillbirth and Early Infant Death’ (Left Coast Press), ‘Sociology of the Body: A Reader’ (Oxford University Press), ‘Cold Comfort: Mothers, Professionals and ADHD’ (University of Toronto Press) and ‘A Special Hell: Institutional Life in Alberta’s Eugenic Years’ (University of Toronto Press).

Michelle Millar is Senior Research Fellow at the UNESCO Child and Family Research Centre, and has acted as Principal Investigator on several funded research projects, including the IRC Social Protection Research Innovation Award, the outputs of which culminated in her receiving the President’s Award for Societal Impact from the National University of Ireland, Galway in 2019.

Lisa Moran is Senior Lecturer and Head of Department at the Department of Social Care and Early Childhood, South East Technological University, Waterford, Ireland. Her principal research interests are biographic narrative methodologies, the working lives of veterinarians, children who are in state care, and research ethics. She is Senior Fellow of the Higher Education Academy, UK, and Vice-President of the Sociological Association of Ireland.

Lyudmila Nurse is Honorary Research Fellow in the Department of Education, University of Oxford, where she was a Research fellow between 2017 and 2022. She is a Research Director of Oxford XXI think tank, of which she is a co-founder. Her research and publications include international comparative studies of identities and belonging, migration, cultural diversity, the wellbeing of families with children and young people, parenting, educational inequalities and qualitative and biographical research methods. Lyudmila is a co-editor of the Policy Press (Bristol) book series ‘Advances in Biographical Research’. She is currently Coordinator of Research Network 03 ‘Biographical Perspectives on European Societies’ of the European Sociological Association.

Jana Obrovská is affiliated with the Department of Education, Masaryk University, Brno, Czechia, dealing with research topics such as student diversity, inclusive education, education of minority groups, and socio-cultural disadvantage in educational processes. Methodologically, she focuses on qualitative research, especially on school ethnography. She was the principal investigator as well as team member of several research projects supported by the Czech Science Foundation. She was also involved in international projects supported within the grant scheme Horizon 2020 (such as the Inclusive Education and Social Support to Tackle Inequalities in Society [ISOTIS] project). Currently, she is a member of the education research group within National Institute for Research on the Socioeconomic Impact of Disease and Systemic Risk (SYRI), Masaryk University, Brno, Czechia.

Daniela Reimer is Professor in the School of Social Work, Zurich University of Applied Science, Switzerland. She holds university diplomas in social work (2004) and pedagogy (2007) and a PhD on normality and biography (2016) from the University of Siegen, Germany. Her research is on foster care, normality, family images and biography. In addition to her research, she is involved in transferring research to practice and teaches history and theories in social work.

Kateřina Sidiropulu-Janků is Senior Researcher at the Institute for Applied Research on Aging at the Carinthia University of Applied Sciences, Austria and was previously Assistant Professor at Masaryk University and the University of Ostrava, Czechia. She was educated at Masaryk University and graduated with a bachelor’s degree in media studies and communication and sociology, and a master’s degree and PhD degree in Sociology, focusing on ethnographic research of ethnic minority migration, qualitative and biographical methods, and research ethics. Recently she is a PhD candidate in architecture at the Czech Technical University in Prague and she focuses on interdisciplinary and transdisciplinary research, PAR, technological support of social innovations and the analysis of public spaces of small cities in the phenomenological perspective.