Notes on Contributors

Viviana Asara is Assistant Professor in Sociology at the Department of Humanities at the University of Ferrara (Italy) and a research affiliate with the Institute for Multi-Level Governance and Development at the Vienna University of Economics and Business (Austria). Her work has focused on political ecology and environmental politics and governance; more particularly she has undertaken research on social movements, democracy, degrowth, commons, social innovations and political parties. Her most recent book is the Handbook of Critical Environmental Politics (Edward Elgar), edited with Luigi Pellizzoni and Emanuele Leonardi, forthcoming in autumn 2022.

Chiara Bottici is a philosopher and a writer, known for her philosophy of political imagination and her feminist writings. She is Director of Gender and Sexuality Studies and Associate Professor of Philosophy at The New School in New York (USA), and she is the author of, among others, Imaginal Politics: Images beyond Imagination and The Imaginary (Columbia University Press, 2014), A Philosophy of Political Myth (Cambridge University Press, 2007) and Anarchafeminism and A Feminist Mythology (both Bloomsbury, 2021). She also co-authored, with sociologist Benoît Challand, Imagining Europe: Myth, Memory, and Identity (Cambridge University Press, 2013) and The Myth of the Clash of Civilizations (Routledge, 2010).

Laura Centemeri is Senior Researcher in Environmental Sociology at the French National Centre for Scientific Research (CNRS) and a member of the Center for the Study of Social Movements (CEMS) at L’Ecole des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales (EHESS, France). Her areas of research interest and projects include: sociology of (e)valuation and environmental conflicts, environmental movements, sociology of repair, and environmental disasters. She is currently doing research on agroecology and preparedness to climate change in agriculture in Italy, with a focus on the permaculture movement. Her most recent books are La permaculture ou l’art de réhabiter (Éditions Quae, 2019) and the edited volume Rethinking Post-Disaster Recovery: Socio-Anthropological Perspectives on Repairing Environments (Routledge, 2022, with Sezin Topçu and J. Peter Burgess).
Suryamayi Aswini Clarence-Smith is a researcher, educator and activist focused on prefigurative and utopian practice, based in the intentional community of Auroville. She has a PhD in international development (University of Sussex, UK) and is a founding member of The Auroville Research Platform, affiliated with the Sri Aurobindo International Institute of Educational Research (India). Her work primarily explores alternative practices in economy, governance and education. Recent and forthcoming publications are to be found in the Ralahine Utopian Studies series (forthcoming, Peter Lang), the Palgrave Handbook of Learning for Transformation (Palgrave Macmillan, 2022, with Bem Le Hunte, Katie Ross and Aditi Rosegger) and the journal Sustainability Science (2022, with Lara Monticelli).

Davina Cooper is Research Professor in Law and Political Theory at King’s College London (UK). She is the author of six books, including Everyday Utopias: The Conceptual Life of Promising Spaces (Duke University Press, 2013) and Feeling like a State: Desire, Denial, and the Recasting of Authority (Duke University Press, 2019). Her research combines two strands of prefigurative work: analyses of radical and transgressive governance practices – state and non-state; and prefigurative conceptualizing, where conceptual meanings that speak to hoped-for futures are advanced. During 2018–2022, she directed an ESRC-funded project on the Future of Legal Gender, which researched the implications of abolishing legal sex status.

Joost de Moor is Assistant Professor at the Centre for European Studies and Comparative Politics at SciencesPo (France). His work focuses on the various ways in which citizens concerned about the environment become politically active – individually or collectively – to address their concerns. He is particularly interested in the ways environmental activists navigate a political context marked by the apparent inability of states and international organizations to address crises like climate change. He has published on these topics in journals including Environmental Politics, Theory and Society and the International Journal of Urban and Regional Research.

Antonia De Vita is Associate Professor in General and Social Pedagogy and co-founder of the Territori in Libera Transizione research group in the Department of Human Sciences at the University of Verona (Italy). Her research interests span gender studies, critical education and social pedagogy; she also researches ecological citizenship with a focus on informal and transformative learning. Her most recent publication is the edited volume Fragilità contemporane. Fenomenologie della violenza e della vulnerabilità (Mimesis Edizioni, 2021).
Ana Cecilia Dinerstein  (MA, PhD) is Reader in Sociology at the University of Bath (UK). She teaches political sociology and Marxist, critical, decolonial and feminist theory, and has opened up a new research field: the global politics of hope. She is a member of the core group of the Global Tapestry of Alternatives. Her publications include The Politics of Autonomy in Latin America: The Art of Organising Hope (Palgrave Macmillan, 2015), Social Sciences for An Other Politics: Women Theorising without Parachutes (Palgrave Macmillan, 2016, editor), Open Marxism 4: Against a Closing World (Pluto Press, 2019, co-edited With Alfonso García Vela, Edith González and John Holloway) and A World Beyond Work? Labour, Money and the Capitalist State between Crisis and Utopia (Emerald, 2021, with Frederick Harry Pitts).

Arturo Escobar is an activist researcher from Colombia, working on territorial struggles against extractivism, post-developmentalist and post-capitalist transitions, and ontological design. He was Professor of Anthropology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (USA) until 2018 and is affiliated with the PhD Program in Design and Creation, Universidad de Caldas, Manizales, Colombia. His most recent books are: Designs for the Pluriverse: Radical Interdependence, Autonomy, and the Making of Worlds (Duke University Press, 2018) and Pluriversal Politics: The Real and the Possible (Duke University Press, 2020). He is currently working on a book on relationality (Designing Relationally: Making and Restor(y)ing Life) with Michal Osterweil and Kriti Sharma.

Francesca Forno is Associate Professor in Sociology at the University of Trento (Italy). Her interests include political consumerism and sustainable community movement organizations. She has a special focus on the consequences of the spread of market-based forms of action for citizens’ participation and mobilization. She has published on civic participation and social movements, and has conducted research on political consumerism, collaborative consumption, grassroots initiatives, social eco-innovation and alternative food networks.

Emil Husted is Associate Professor in the Department of Organization at Copenhagen Business School (Denmark). His research is centred on the internal orchestration of political parties and social movements, often with a focus on the mediating role of digital technology. Emil’s research has been published in international journals such as Organization Studies, Organization and The Information Society. He is co-author of Digital Organizing: Revisiting Themes in Organization Studies (Bloomsbury, 2019, with Ursula Plesner). Furthermore, Emil is a member of the editorial collective at the independent journal ephemera.
Aris Komporozos-Athanasiou is the author of Speculative Communities: Living with Uncertainty in a Financialized World (University of Chicago Press, 2022). He is Associate Professor of Sociology at the Social Research Institute, UCL (UK), where he leads the Sociology & Social Theory Research Group. His current book project, tentatively titled Real Fake, is an intellectual history of distortion technologies and myth-making in finance capitalism.

Mikko Laamanen is Associate Professor in Marketing in the Lifestyle Research Centre at EMLyon Business School (France). His research focuses on everyday politics of inclusion and social change with empirical work on consumer lifestyle movements, alternative organizing, the sharing economy, multi-stakeholder value and arts-based community engagement. This research has been published in, among others, Current Sociology, International Journal of Consumer Studies, Journal of Cleaner Production, Journal of Marketing Management, and Marketing Theory, as well as in the Handbook of Social Movements Across Disciplines (Springer, 2010) and the Handbook of the Sharing Economy (Edward Elgar, 2019).

Marianne Maeckelbergh is Professor of Political Anthropology at Ghent University (Belgium) and Professor of Global Sociology at Leiden University (Netherlands). Her research explores how people’s everyday political practices inform and transform the way we understand democracy. She is the author of The Will of the Many: How the Alterglobalisation Movement Is Changing the Face of Democracy (Pluto Press, 2009) and co-producer of the Global Uprisings film series. She is the principal investigator on the Property and Democratic Citizenship project funded by the European Research Council, which explores how property regimes structure experiences of citizenship.

Lara Monticelli is Assistant Professor and Marie Skłodowska-Curie fellow at Copenhagen Business School (Denmark). Her ongoing research project, Ecovillages as Laboratories of Sustainability and Social Change, focuses on the (re-)emergence of prefigurative social movements as laboratories experimenting with practices of resilience and resistance to environmental, economic and societal challenges. Lara is especially interested in how these movements re-politicize everyday life, representing radical attempts to embody a critique to capitalism and prefigure alternative futures. She is the co-founder of the Alternatives to Capitalism research network at the Society for the Advancement of Socio-Economics and co-editor of the book series Alternatives to Capitalism in the 21st Century, published by Bristol University Press.
Erik Mygind du Plessis is Associate Professor in the Department of Business and Management at the University of Southern Denmark. His research interests revolve around the ways organizational subjects are constituted through dynamics of power and resistance, and to this end he has studied phenomena such as mindfulness, self-help books, whistleblowing, prepping and informal resistance. From a theory perspective, he is interested in post-structuralism, critical theory and new materialism, and from an empirical perspective, he looks for interstices in which alternatives to dominant forms of organizing might emerge.

Eleonora Gea Piccardi is a PhD candidate in the Centre for Social Studies at the University of Coimbra (Portugal). Her present work focuses on the Kurdish women’s movement in Rojava and, at the transnational level, the revolutionary praxis it is producing around feminism, ecology and radical democracy. Her fields of interest are decolonial feminisms, feminist political ecology, social movements and praxis/pedagogies of socioecological organization. She carries out militant research and is a member of the Ecology and Society working group at the Centre for Social Studies. Her latest publication is ‘The Challenges of a Kurdish Ecofeminist Perspective: Maria Mies, Abdullah Öcalan, and the Praxis of Jineoloji’ (2021).

Frederick Harry Pitts is Lecturer in Work, Employment, Organization and Public Policy in the School of Management at the University of Bristol (UK), where he leads the Perspectives on Work research group in the Faculty of Social Sciences and Law. He also co-edits the Bristol University Press online magazine Futures of Work. He is a research fellow of the Institute for the Future of Work. He is co-author of A World Beyond Work? Labour, Money and the Capital State Between Crisis and Utopia (Emerald, 2021, with Ana Cecilia Dinerstein) and author of Value (Polity, 2021).

Paul Raekstad is Assistant Professor in Political Theory at the University of Amsterdam, working theories of freedom, critiques of capitalism and debates about alternative economic institutions and how to attain them, with a particular focus on prefigurative politics, direct action and proposals for a Green New Deal. They recently co-authored Prefigurative Politics: Building Tomorrow Today (Polity) and are currently completing a book on Karl Marx’s Realist Critique of Capitalism (Palgrave).

Jilly Traganou is Professor of Architecture and Urbanism at Parsons School of Design. Her publications include The Tōkaidō Road: Travelling and Representation in Edo and Meiji Japan (RoutledgeCurzon, 2004), Travel, Space, Architecture (Ashgate, 2009, co-edited with Miodrag Mitrašinović), Designing the Olympics: Representation, Participation, Contestation (Routledge, 2016) and Design and Political Dissent: Spaces, Visuals, Materialities (Routledge, 2021, editor). She is currently working on an edited volume, tentatively titled Design, Migration, Displacement, with Sarah Lichtman, to be published by Routledge. She is co-editor-in-chief of the journal Design and Culture.

Francesco Vittori is Research Fellow in General and Social Pedagogy and a member of the Territori in Libera Transizione research group in the Department of Human Sciences at the University of Verona (Italy). His research interests cover critical and social pedagogy, gender studies and ecological citizenship, with a specific focus on agroecology. His most recent contributions appear in the journals Sociologia Urbana e Rurale and Sustainability, and the edited collection Fragilità contemporanea: Fenomenologie della violenza e della vulnerabilità (Mimesis Edizioni, 2021, edited by Antonia De Vita).

Stefan Wahlen is Professor of Food Sociology at the University of Giessen (Germany). His research and teaching focuses on everyday practices and their political, organizational and institutional parameters. He previously worked as Assistant Professor of the Sociology of Consumption at Wageningen University (Netherlands). He earned his PhD in consumer economics from the University of Helsinki (Finland) with a thesis entitled Governing Everyday Consumption. He is a member of the steering committee of the Sustainable Consumption Research and Action Initiative in Europe and editor of the journal Consumption and Society, published by Bristol University Press.

Luke Yates is Lecturer in Sociology and Researcher at the Sustainable Consumption Institute, University of Manchester (UK). His work explores collective action, everyday consumption practices and the new digital economy. His interest in prefigurative politics emerges from trying to better understand debates around social movement strategy. His current work explores the societal shifts associated with platform capitalism through looking at social movements and platform businesses’ legitimation tactics.
