Acknowledgements

To those who have loved me, to those who gave me my name, to those who stand with me, to those who stand against me, to those who see me, to those who do not, to those who gave me words, to those who have questioned me, to those who have inspired me, to those who encourage me, to the things that failed to destroy, to those who will read these words, to those who will not, to the earth we walk on – the earth that will swallow us, to the air we breathe, to those with whom we share this planet, to those we will dream with, to those we dream of, to those we dream without, to the sky we exist under, to the waters we need to live, to those who have gone ahead, to those who will come after us, to the better world we may never live to see, to its dreamers, its architects and builders … I give thanks, I acknowledge you, and to you I dedicate these words.