Acknowledgements

Many people have contributed to this volume in different ways.

First, friends and colleagues. Some viewed the editorial proposal, others read the manuscript, while others provided material and contacts that have proved to be very useful: Paolo Ceri, former professor of Sociology at the University of Florence; Ernesto Ugo Savona, former professor of Criminology and founder of the Joint Research Center on Innovation and Crime (Transcrime); Dina Siegel, director of the Criminology department at the Willem Pompe Institute for Criminal Law and Criminology of Utrecht University; Alexandras Dobryninas, director of the Criminology Institute of Vilnius University; Felia Allum, professor of Comparative Organized Crime and Corruption at the University of Bath; Andrea Gimenez-Salinas, Professor of Criminology at the Comillas Pontifical University of Madrid; Elisa Garcia, professor of Criminology at the University of Malaga; and Christina Zarafonitou, professor of Criminology at the University of Panteion.

Magistrates and prosecutors: Giovanni Pio Luciano Melillo, National Anti-Mafia Prosecutor; Giovanbattista Tona, judge at the Court of Caltanissetta; Lina Trovato and Giuseppe Bonomo, prosecutors of the District Anti-Mafia Directorate of Catania.

Police officers: Felix Duran Garrido, head of the Civil Guard’s National Anti-Human Trafficking Unit; Inspector Ivan D’Anna of the Palermo Police; and Giovanni Giudice, high officer of the Ancona Police.

María Rodríguez Caro of the Spanish Commission for Refugees in Seville.

Members of civil society organizations: Javi Cano and Concepcion Recuero of the Don Bosco Foundation; Helena Gómez de León Sánchez-Arjona of the NGO Arcobaleno; Isabella Escalante of the Somaschi Foundation; Nicoletta Ulivi and Roberto Macri of the Santa Rita Foundation; Georgios Alexopoulos and Nora Giannakaki of the NGO Symplexis.

Arman Saberi, friend and IT ‘wizard’.

The migrants who agreed to be interviewed.

Agnese Desideri, my research assistant; and the graduates of my Sociology and Sociology of Migration courses for their help in collecting the material: Francesco Chiellino, Emma Festini, Irene Tosi, Giuliana Giudice and Isabella Ranieri.
  Rebecca Tomlinson, Grace Carroll and Becky Taylor of Bristol University Press for their help and patience.
  Finally, Laura Sieni, who helped me to collect statistical data.
  My heartfelt thanks go to all these people, without whose invaluable help the volume would not have seen the light; nonetheless, as author, I take responsibility for the content contained herein.
