This work would not have been completed had it not been for the faithful companionship of a number of people. I am most grateful to those who read earlier versions of this book and who lent their affirmation to it by means of incisive questioning and comments. In particular, I would like to thank Avigail Eisenberg, Don Blake, Alan Cairns, Samuel LaSelva, Bruce Miller, Peter Meekison, and UBC Press’s two anonymous assessors. I extend a special thanks to Paul Tennant, an ever-present source of support and reassurance as this book moved from infancy through to maturity. Thank you for your generosity of spirit and for teaching me so much about the nature of scholarship.

Others supported and sustained me as well. For my colleagues at Capilano College, in particular Paul Mier, David Winchester, and Cam Sylvester, I am most grateful. Thank you for the opportunity to teach and for sharing your wisdom. To UBC Press, especially Jean Wilson, Peter Milroy, and Darcy Cullen, thank you for guiding me through the publishing process with the greatest of civility, good humour, and care. To my friends Hamish Telford, Peter Sinnema, Jan Wesselius, William and Lois Cooke, Tony Sayers, David and Roseanne Sovka, Brian and Kaycie Burtchett, Lionel and Lynn LaCroix, Harry Kits, and Lorraine Land, thank you for your many words of encouragement along the way. Most of all, I thank the members of my family who uphold me in so many ways: Lynn and Marc, Michelle and Tim, Cliff and Claude, Bob and Chris, Teresa and Wes, Simon and Henny, and especially my remarkable parents, Peter and Jeanette.

Finally, my greatest debt of all is owed to my children, Emma, Darren, and Adrian, and to my spouse, Rita. To Emma, Darren, and Adrian, thank you for the indescribable joy you bring to my daily existence. And to Rita, thank you for your constancy and love, which fill my heart with gratitude. It is to you that I dedicate this work.
