We thank the University of Chicago—particularly Walter Massey, emeritus trustee and special advisor to the president, and Professor Amanda Woodward, dean of the Division of Social Sciences—for the university’s deep commitment to honoring the life and work of W. Allison Davis. We express our profound thanks to David Varel for tirelessly documenting in his elegant work The Lost Black Scholar so much we did not know about the lives and legacies of Elizabeth Stubbs Davis and W. Allison Davis. And lastly, we thank Isabel Wilkerson for her magnificent foreword to this new edition of Deep South, for championing Deep South as one of the most important works on race in America, and for extolling the brilliance and courage of our remarkable parents.
