Getting this book ready for publication has been a long journey. It began in 2005 when Takata Tokio invited me to give a talk on the classification of animals and plants in medieval Chinese Buddhism at Kyoto University. In 2009, when I published this talk as my very first article, the late Denis Sinor helped edit it. Since then, numerous colleagues and friends have helped me at various stages of preparing, writing, revising, and editing different sections of the manuscript. In particular, I would like to thank the following mentors, colleagues, and friends for their invaluable support: Barbara Ambros, Jinhua Chen, Nicola Di Cosmo, Mădălina Diaconu, Thomas DuBois, Vincent Durand-Dastès, Zhe Ji, Yan Jin, Xiaofei Kang, Keith Knapp, Li-ying Kuo, Victor H. Mair, Alfreda Murck, Tamar Novick, Reiko Ohnuma, Lisa Onaga, Willard J. Peterson, Xinjiang Rong, Dominic Sachsenmaier, Dagmar Schäfer, Wutian Sha, Meir Shahar, Shengkai, Madeline Spring, Roel Sterckx, Jacqueline I. Stone, Stephen F. Teiser, Edward Q. Wang, Zhanru, Guangda Zhang, Tao Zhang, and Xing Zhang. I am also very grateful to many colleagues at Arizona State University for their trust and support: Stephen R. Bokenkamp, Robert Joe Cutter, Anne Feldhaus, Joel Gereboff, Juliane Schober, Hoyt C. Tillman, and Stephen H. West. Many administrators of the School of Historical, Philosophical, and Religious Studies (SHPRS) and the School of International Languages and Letters (SILC), faculty heads, and school staff helped facilitate my research and sabbatical leaves.

Numerous programs and institutions have invited and hosted me to share my research with colleagues and a broader audience. I acknowledged them here with profound gratitude: Buddhist Studies Workshop at Princeton University, Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, Clare Hall of Cambridge University, Department of East Asian Studies at Cambridge University, Department of East Asian Studies at University of Göttingen, Department of East Asian Studies at University of Göttingen, Department of East Asian Studies at...
State University of New York in Albany, Department of Asian Studies at the University of British Columbia, Department of East Asian Studies at Tel Aviv University, Department of Asian Studies at Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Department of Philosophy at Tsinghua University, Department of South Asian Studies at Peking University, School of History at People’s University of China, Department of Philosophy at Sun Yat-sen University, Center for the Study of the Yellow River Civilization and Sustainable Development at Henan University, the Sheng Yen Education Foundation, Institut national des langues et civilisations orientales (INALCO), and Max Planck Institute for the History of Science in Berlin (MPIWG). At Arizona State University, the Center for the Study of Religion and Conflict (CSRC), the Center for Asian Research (CAR), and the Institute for Humanities Research (IHR) offered travel and seed grants to support my research. A junior scholar grant from the Chiang Ching-kuo Foundation (CCKF) in 2009 helped the early stage of this project. The last stage of the manuscript benefited from a research grant of the Gerda Henkel Foundation in 2021.

Tremendous gratitude to the editors of the Sheng Yen Series in Chinese Buddhist Studies at Columbia University Press, Chün-fang Yü, Daniel Stevenson, and Jimmy Yu, for their support. I am so grateful to Lowell Frye for his patient and compassionate help guiding me through every step of this publication project. Thanks to Leslie Kriesel, Mary Bagg, and Cynthia Col for their professional efforts in producing, copyediting, and indexing the book. Three reviewers offered very constructive, meticulous, and comprehensive reports. Thanks to them for their collegiality, professionalism, and support. All errors and shortcoming remain my sole responsibility.

Lastly, I thank my wife, Fei, and my kids, Sarina and Linden, for their companionship, and the animals who enrich our family life in the past, present, and future.
IN THE LAND OF TIGERS AND SNAKES