CONTENTS

Acknowledgments vii
Abbreviations ix
Glossary xi
Introduction 1

1. New Granada: A Categorically Different Viceroyalty 13
2. Coming into View: The Pacific Lowlands in Manuscript Maps 19
3. The Map of the Atrato River and Pueblos of Cuna Indians: The Atrato Vigía and the Short-Lived Cuna Reducción of Murindo, 1759–1778 37
4. The Map of the Chocó, Panama, and Cupica: The Unrealized Potential of a Pacific Port, 1777–1808 57
6. The Map of the Yurumangui Indians: The “Discovery” and Decimation of the Pacific Lowlands’ Indigenous Inhabitants, 1742–1780 87

Conclusions: What Manuscript Maps Contribute to the Study of Colonial Latin America 105

Appendix A: Transcribed Text from Manuscript Map Legends 109

Appendix B: Technical Study of the Manuscript Map of Dagua River Region, Colombia 114

Notes 117
References 145
Index 159