Acknowledgments

There are a number of people whom I would like to thank for their help in this project. First is Professor Emmette S. Redford of the University of Texas, whose support in including this book as part of his series on the administration of the Johnson presidency led to its publication by the University of Texas Press. Emmette epitomizes the terms "gentleman" and "scholar" and I appreciate his professional and personal encouragement. I also appreciate the editorial help provided by Professor James Anderson of the University of Houston and Dr. Richard McCulley, as well as the editors at the University of Texas Press. Professor Sheldon Goldman of the University of Massachusetts generously opened his extensive files on judicial appointees to me. The late Ray McNichols, United States district judge for the District of Idaho, discussed his nomination with me.

I wish to acknowledge the two summer research grants provided by the Lyndon Baines Johnson Foundation and some administrative support given by Robert Blank, chairman of the Political Science Department of the University of Idaho. The Lyndon B. Johnson Library and the librarians there were of immeasurable help in this work, as were Evelyn Brandt and Helen Petersen of the Library of the United States Court of Appeals for the North Circuit in Pasadena, California. David Bowie typed the manuscript.

A more personal note of thanks goes to Sarah, Austin, and Blaine, who gave and continued to give love and encouragement in this and all my efforts.
