Foreword

THIS IS THE NINTH in a series of publications designed to comprise an administrative history of the Johnson presidency. The series concentrates attention on the processes and problems in presidential management of the executive branch during the Johnson years.

Some of the studies in the series deal with the infrastructure of presidential management—the structures, personnel, and operating arrangements for executive decision making and policy administration. Included are Emmette S. Redford and Marlan Blissett, Organizing the Executive Branch: The Johnson Presidency (University of Chicago Press, 1981); Richard L. Schott and Dagmar Hamilton, People, Positions, and Power: The Political Appointments of Lyndon B. Johnson (University of Chicago Press, 1983); Emmette S. Redford and Richard E. McCulley, White House Operations: The Johnson Presidency (University of Texas Press, 1986); and David M. Welborn and Jesse Burkhead, Intergovernmental Relations in the American Administrative State: The Johnson Presidency (University of Texas Press, 1989). Another study examines the exercise of the executive function in the appointment of judges: Neil D. McFeeley, Appointment of Judges: The Johnson Presidency (University of Texas Press, 1987).

Other volumes in the series deal with the presidential management of policymaking and implementation processes in particular policy areas. In addition to the book on foreign policy, these include W. Henry Lambright, Presidential Management of Science and Technology: The Johnson Presidency (University of Texas Press, 1985); James E. Anderson and Jared E. Hazelton, Managing Macroeconomic Policy: The Johnson Presidency (University of Texas Press, 1986); and Harvey C. Mansfield, Sr., Illustrations of Presidential Management: Johnson's Cost Reduction and Tax Increase Campaigns (Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs, 1988).

Yet other studies are underway that focus on presidential management of the implementation of civil rights legislation, presidential management of the Vietnam War, and White House roles in economic regulation.

This series of studies has been financed by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, with additional aid from the Lyndon Baines Johnson Foundation, the Hoblitzelle Foundation, and the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs of the University of Texas at Austin.

The findings and conclusions in the various works in this series do not necessarily represent the view of any donor.
