Acknowledgments

This volume had its origins in a conference held at UCLA in May 1998, which I co-organized with Roger Waldinger, then Director of the UCLA Lewis Center for Regional Policy Studies. My heartfelt thanks to Roger for his ongoing support and practical advice, which helped transform a vague idea floated in a casual e-mail into a palpable reality. The other person who contributed immeasurably to this project is Kent Wong, director of the UCLA Labor Center, who offered innumerable suggestions and helped involve the local labor community in the conference, greatly enriching both the discussions held there and ultimately the contents of this volume.

In addition to the seed money provided by the Lewis Center, I am grateful to the many conference co-sponsors: the California Policy Seminar, UC Mexus, the UCLA Center for Social Theory and Comparative History, the UCLA Division of Social Sciences, the UCLA Associate Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs, and the Office of the President of the University of California. The administrative support of Margaret Johnson, Belinda Vigil, and Luis Escala Rabadan was also essential to making the conference a success. Thanks also to David Gutiérrez, Sanford Jacoby, Peter Olney, and Paul Johnston, who served as commentators at the conference, stimulating valuable discussions and offering insightful comments on earlier versions of the chapters appearing in this volume.

Fran Benson at Cornell University Press was enthusiastic about this book from the outset and offered consistent encouragement at every step in the publication process. Dan Clawson and Elissa McBride provided supportive and incisive comments on the conference proceedings that were extremely helpful in shaping the final version of the book. Thanks also to Laura Robinson for expert technical assistance in the final stages of preparing the manuscript for publication.

RUTH MILKMAN

Los Angeles, California

ORGANIZING IMMIGRANTS