A Note on Transliteration

I follow the standard English-language academic conventions for transliterating Japanese. Names are written in the Japanese order of the family name before the given, and words common in English, such as Tokyo, are written without macrons. Unless otherwise noted, all translations are my own.
Making Tea, Making Japan