CONTENTS

Preface v

PART ONE: SEPARATION
1. The Arc of Opposition 3
2. The Last, Lost Good Chance: 1937 8
3. 1937-39: Japan Goes Deeper into the Stubble 17
4. The Dismay of the Japanese Strategists: August, 1939 25
5. Separation but Still not Enmity: the Winter of 1939-40 38

PART TWO: HOSTILITY
6. The First Waves of German Victory Reach the Southwest Pacific: April, 1940 49
7. The Grave Dilemma before the United States: May, 1940 56
8. Japan Starts on the Road South: June, 1940 66
9. The American Government Forbears 72
10. Japan Selects a New Government 76
11. Japan Stencils Its Policy in Indelible Ink: July, 1940 84
12. Our First Firm Counteraction 88
13. Maneuver and Resistance 95
14. We Stop the Shipment of Scrap Iron 101
15. The Making of the Alliance with the Axis: September, 1940 110
16. We Draw Closer to Britain 122
17. After Our Elections: Steps towards a Concerted Program 133
18. Matsuoka Pursues the Great Combination 145
19. At the Same Time Japan Continues to Seek the Best Road South 150

PART THREE: ENMITY
21. We Reach a World-Wide Strategic Accord with Britain: March, 1941 165
22. Hull and Nomura Begin the Search for Formulas of Peace 171
23. Matsuoka Goes to Berlin and Moscow, and Returns with a Neutrality Pact 180
CONTENTS

24. The Two Faces of Japanese Diplomacy Glare at One Another: April, 1941 188
25. Would Japan Stand Still While We Extended Ourselves in the Atlantic? The Spring of 1941 196
26. Japan Chafes and Germany Invades the Soviet Union: May-June, 1941 202
27. Japan Makes the Crucial Decision: July 2, 1941 209
28. The Konoye Cabinet Resigns—to Get Rid of Matsuoka 219
29. The United States and Britain Prepare to Impose Sanctions 227
30. We Freeze Japan's Funds 236
31. Was Japan to Have Any More Oil? 242
32. The Choice before Japan Is Defined; and Konoye Seeks a Meeting with Roosevelt 251
33. Roosevelt Meets Churchill; Argentia and After: August 1941 255
34. The Japanese High Command Demands That the Issue with the United States Be Faced and Forced 261
35. The Idea of a Roosevelt-Konoye Meeting Dies; the Deadlock Is Complete: October, 1941 271
36. The Army Insists on a Decision for War; Konoye Quits; Tojo Takes Over 282

PART FOUR: WAR

37. The Last Offers to the United States Are Formulated: November 5, 1941 291
40. As Stubborn as Ever: the American Answer, November 26, 1941 320
41. The Last Arrangements and Formalities for War 326
42. The Clasp of War Is Closed 333

Index 343

Map follows page 20