

Notes on Contributors

Susanne Enderwitz received her PhD from Freie Universität Berlin. Since 2002, she is professor for Arabic and Islamic Studies at Heidelberg University and in 2011 became member of the CRC 933. In her research, she focuses on medieval and modern Arabic literature.

Douglas Fear is assistant lecturer for Old and Eastern Middle Iranian languages at Heidelberg University.

Angeliki Karagianni received her PhD from the University of Sheffield, UK. From 2011 through 2015, as a member of the CRC 933 she has been research associate at the Department for Classical Archaeology at Heidelberg University.

Christoph Mauntel received his PhD from Heidelberg University with a work on violence in late medieval France. Since 2015 he is a research fellow of the Graduiertenkolleg “Religiöses Wissen im vormodernen Europa” (Graduate School on “Religious Knowledge in Pre-modern Europe”) at the University of Tübingen, working on geographical concepts of world order.

Rebecca Sauer received her PhD from Cologne University. Since 2011, she is research associate at Heidelberg University, working on medieval Arabic administration. She is member of the CRC 933.

Christina Tsouparopoulou received her PhD from Cambridge University. From 2009 through 2011 she has been postdoctoral researcher at the Max-Planck-Institute for the History of Science, Berlin. From 2011 through 2015 she has been research associate at the CRC 933 in the field of Near Eastern Archaeology.

Lisa Wilhelmi received her PhD from the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), London. Since 2011, she has been research associate at Heidelberg University, focusing on the materialization of Mesopotamian scholarship. She is member of the CRC 933.

