

Contents

Abbreviations and Translations — XIII

Introduction — 1

- 1 Ancient Literary Canons from Antiquity to the Present Day — 7
 - 1.1 The Idea of Literary Canons in Ancient Thought — 7
 - 1.2 Canon: A Brief History of the Word — 13
 - 1.3 Greek Literature in the Hands of a Latin Grammarian: Quintilian's Selection — 18
 - 1.4 The Polemic on Ancient Canonical Literature from David Ruhnken to the First Half of the Twentieth Century — 23
 - 1.5 Approaching Literary Canons from Different Perspectives: Weltliteratur and Distant Reading — 31

- 2 Cicero, History-Writing, and Canonical Greek Historians — 39
 - 2.1 Hellenistic Treatises on Greek Historiography — 39
 - 2.2 What was Cicero's Knowledge of the Greek Historians? — 46
 - 2.3 Cicero's Worthy Opinion (digna vox) on Greek Canonical Historians — 49
 - 2.4 Minor Greek Historians in Cicero's Writings — 55
 - 2.5 Xenophon princeps philosophorum — 58

- 3 Shaping the Canons: Dionysius' Critical Essays — 66
 - 3.1 Introduction on Dionysius' Literary Circle and Critical Essays — 66
 - 3.2 The Letter to Pompeius and the Canon of Greek Historiography — 72
 - 3.3 How is a Historian Supposed to Write? Herodotus vs. Thucydides — 73
 - 3.4 Worthy and Unworthy Historians: Xenophon, Philistus, Theopompus — 78
 - 3.5 A Telling Absence: Ephorus and his Exclusion — 86
 - 3.6 Thucydides in the Dock: Dionysius' Judgement — 88
 - 3.7 Dionysius' Legacy: Challenging his Judgement on Thucydides — 97

- 4 In the Wake of Classicism: Dionysius, Rome, and Classical Athens — 103
- 4.1 Classicism and Classical: A Diachronic Overview — 103
 - 4.2 Dionysius' Classicism and the Revival of Rhetoric — 106
 - 4.3 The Canons of Greek Historiography Through the Lens of Classicism — 112
 - 4.4 πραγματικός τύπος in Dionysius — 117
 - 4.5 Dionysius' Ideal Historian: Theopompus — 120
- 5 Canons Before the Canon: From Athens to Alexandria — 123
- 5.1 Thucydides' Continuator and the Historical Cycle: Its Impact on Canon-Formation — 123
 - 5.2 Isocrates and the Greek Historians — 128
 - 5.3 The Peripatetic Tradition and Greek Historiography — 135
 - 5.4 A Hellenistic Source for the First Century BC Canons? — 142
 - 5.5 The Greek Historians in Alexandria — 147
- 6 Greek Historians in the Classroom: Literary Critics and Progymnasmata — 161
- 6.1 Pseudo-Longinus' On the Sublime and Demetrius' On Style — 161
 - 6.2 Aelius Theon's Progymnasmata — 168
 - 6.3 Late Antique Progymnasmata and Some Rhetorical Treatises — 173
 - 6.4 The Greek Historians in Hermogenes and the Caesura in the Historiographical Canons — 179
 - 6.5. One Exception to the Rule: Theopompus in Menander Rhetor — 183
 - 6.6 Hecataeus of Miletus' Appearance in the Rhetorical Tradition and his Role in Hermogenes' On the Categories of Style — 185
- 7 From Dio Chrysostom to Late Antiquity: A Diachronic Analysis of the Canons of Greek Historiography — 189
- 7.1 The Narrowing Canon and the Effect of the Historical Cycle — 189
 - 7.2 Roman Emperors and Classical Education in the Fourth Century AD — 194
 - 7.3 Ausonius, Jerome, and the Greek Historians in a Latin Environment — 200

- 7.4 The Papyri and the Circulation of the Greek Historians in Roman Egypt — 205
- 7.5 Byzantine Lists of Ancient Canonical Authors — 217

Conclusions — 222

Bibliography — 233

Index of Names and Subjects — 265

Selective index of Greek terms — 276

Index locorum — 277

