

CONTENTS

I. RHODE ISLAND AND SCOTLAND, 1755-1775 3-14

Gilbert Stuart's parents. — The snuff-mill at Narragansett. — Bishop Berkeley and Newport. — Smibert the painter. — Stuart's schoolfellows. — Dr. Waterhouse. — Arthur Browne. — Pictures at Newport. — Dr. Moffat. — Cosmo Alexander. — Stuart goes to Edinburgh. — His portrait of Sir John Dick. — Returns to Newport destitute. — Terrors of the Atlantic passage. — The War of Independence. — Stuart a Royalist? — He sails for Europe. — The Stuart family leaves Rhode Island for Nova Scotia. — Gilbert Stuart Newton, R. A.

II. LONDON, 1775-1781 15-29

Stuart arrives in London. — Meets his friend Waterhouse. — Approaches Benjamin West and is assisted by him. — Enters his house as pupil. — The Royal Academy of 1777. — Stuart an exhibitor. — Gainsborough's advice to him. — Stuart not a student of the Royal Academy. — West's house in Newman Street described. — James Dyer his porter and model. — Arthur Browne in London. — Dines with Dr. Johnson at Sir Joshua Reynolds'. — Three pictures at the Royal Academy in 1779. — A signed portrait. — John Trumbull a pupil at West's. — Trumbull arrested. — "Bridewell Jack." — Stuart paints his portrait in prison. — Portraits of West and Dr. Fothergill praised by the critics. — A commission for a portrait.

III. LONDON, 1782-1783 30-45

West and Stuart "in partnership"! — Caleb Whitefoord. — Success at the Royal Academy. — The "Portrait of a Gentleman Skating." — Admired by Walpole. — Sensational reappearance in London in 1878. — Raeburn or Gainsborough? — The critics puzzled. — Lord Charles Pelham-Clinton explains. — The Incorporated Society of Artists and Stuart. — His unrecorded exhibits at their Gallery. — "A Young Lady, whole length." — A new address of Stuart's. — Nathaniel Dance furnishes his studio. — Hudson's palette. — West's portrait of George the Third. — Did Stuart ever meet the King? — Alleged portraits by Stuart. — Sir Joshua shows him his "Mrs. Siddons as the Tragic Muse." — Stuart as a man of fashion. — Emulates the Prince of Wales.

IV. LONDON, 1784-1787 46-67

Stuart paints Sir Joshua. — The President's pocket books. — "The best head of Sir Joshua." — Boydell's Gallery. — Stuart's portrait of Copley. — His Academy pictures of 1785. — John Hoppner as newspaper critic. — His comments on Stuart. — Stuart in New Burlington Street. — Marries Miss Coates. — Dunlap's erroneous statements. — Stuart and the Royal Academy. — Never a candidate for its honours. —

Increasing popularity. — Desenfans on Stuart. — His "Macbeth and the Witches." — Portrait of Mrs. Billington the singer. — "Why is Stuart absent?" — Half price in advance for portraits. — Fifteen portraits for Boydell. — The critic of the Monthly Magazine. — His intimacy with Stuart. — Taking casts of faces. — Stuart on "the test of nature." — Paints Lord Rodney and Mrs. Siddons. — Unrecorded portraits. — "The Vandyck of the time." — The Duke of Northumberland. — The lost group of his children. — The Duke at Boston. — Parke's notes on Stuart. — His extravagance. — Fribourg's snuff-shop. — Sudden collapse of Stuart's prosperity. — He disappears.

V. IRELAND, 1787-1793 68-86

A visit to Dublin. — The Duke of Rutland and the arts. — His correspondence with Sir Joshua. — Neglect of Stuart by writers in Ireland. — Popularity of Arthur Browne in Dublin. — Stuart's farm at Stillorgan. — Herbert's Irish Varieties. — Christopher Pack. — Stuart as a romancer. — Dinner of the Irish artists. — Stuart's amazing stories. — The Irishman and his ancestors. — Stuart's elocution. — Alleged resemblance to John Kemble. — Painting in Ireland. — Viscountess Cremorne. — An American-born peeress. — Her house at Chelsea. — Whistler's nocturnes. — Irish art exhibitions. — Stuart sends portraits from America. — Visits the Dublin art school. — Meets Martin Archer Shee in Dublin. — Stuart's influence on Shee and on other Irish painters. — Letter from Chester Harding. — An Irish critic on Stuart's "portraits in groups." — New light on his work. — Paints Lord Conyngham. — Return of Stuart to America.

VI. NEW YORK AND PHILADELPHIA, 1793-1796 87-110

Stuart leaves Dublin for New York. — Quarrels with fellow traveller. — Entertained in New York by Judge Cushing. — "An extraordinary limner." — Declines to paint the Duke of Kent. — Lord Buchan and Washington. — The Columbian Academy. — Stuart's pupil Vanderlyn. — Mrs. Jay's letters. — A letter from Stuart. He goes to Philadelphia. — At Mrs. Washington's reception. — The first Washington portrait destroyed. — The Lansdowne full length. — When was it painted? — Evidence from Colonel Perkins. — Washington's apathy. — Letter from William Bingham. — The Lansdowne portrait arrives in London. — Injured in the passage. — Lord Wycombe. — Another letter from Bingham. — Stuart's disappointment. — Advertisement of the pirated print in Philadelphia. — Stuart's futile announcement. — Stuart's quarrel with Bingham. — Longacre's story. — Bingham misjudged? — The Washington portrait bought by Samuel Williams. — A forgery sold to hang in the White House. — Stuart paints Chief Justice Shippen. — Trott the miniature painter. — Sally Shippen.

VII. PHILADELPHIA AND WASHINGTON, 1796-1805 . . III-125

Society in Philadelphia. — Stuart removes to the suburbs. — His life in Germantown. — The barn studio. — Washington often there. — The ownership of his portrait. — Claim made by Custis. — Retained by Stuart. — Letters from Stuart. — The Liston portraits. — Stuart Newton. — The Portfolio on Stuart. — Verses on his portraits. — Stuart a poet? — The American Sappho. — Peale's portrait of Stuart. — Washington in 1803. — Stuart the fashion there. — Mrs. Madison on Stuart. — Some of his Washington sitters. — Jerome Bonaparte at Baltimore. — Stuart paints his wife. — Jerome's quarrel with Stuart. — Portraits on the floor.

VIII. BOSTON, 1805-1809 126-140

Stuart goes to Boston. — Trumbull's disappointment. — Stuart's sister at Boston. — Dr. Waterhouse and his early portrait of the artist. — Boston in 1799. — A pleasant place to live in. — Earlier Boston painters. — Smibert's colour shop. — The artist's colourman of Stuart's time. — The Mall. — Henry Sargent and Stuart. — Sargent's picture sale. — Faneuil Hall. — Stuart's full length of Washington. — Fourth of July banquet at Faneuil Hall. — The portrait on view. — Stuart and the decoration of the Hall. — His health drunk at the banquet. — Parkman and the portrait. — Dr. Waterhouse and vaccination. — Mrs. Winthrop on Stuart. — He takes a house on Washington Street. — The Emerald. — A Carolinian on Stuart's Washington at Faneuil Hall. — The head too small. — The General doing nothing. — Ker Porter's Battle of Lodi. — The Something. — Proposed Society of Artists for Boston.

IX. BOSTON, 1810-1817 141-156

Washington Allston. — Stuart and Jacob Eichholtz. — Sully on Stuart. — "Never disguised by liquor." — Knapp's description of Stuart. — He paints Mrs. Peabody. — A shy sitter. — Stuart's capriciousness. — Neglects commissions. — Severe remarks by John Quincy Adams. — Stuart and "Gerrymander." — Cooke the actor. — Picture exhibition at Philadelphia. — Stuart's portraits there. — "Diamonds of the first water." — His dislike of criticism. — A supposed Stuart portrait of Dr. Lathrop. — Henry Williams the real author. — Stuart advises him. — The Boston Directory. — Stuart's house and Washington's head-quarters. — Stuart at Roxbury. — Dunlap visits him. — Portraits of Hull and Bainbridge. — The war with Great Britain. — Difficult to obtain canvases. — Stuart's panels. — American water-colours. — Matthew Harris Jouett. — Stuart exhibits at New York. — Comparison with Romney. — Critic's contempt for Raeburn. — Two full lengths of Washington. — The Lenox Library version. — John Neal's interview with Stuart. — "A man of noble type, robust and hearty." — Stuart talks of Washington. — A Philadelphia wine club.

X. BOSTON, 1818-1823 157-174

John Quincy Adams on Stuart. — Washington Irving returns for good. — His admiration for Stuart. — Allston shows Stuart his Belshazzar. — Effect of Stuart's criticism. — Trumbull visits Boston. — Exhibits The Signing of the Declaration of Independence. — Attacked in Congress for showing it. — "Perambulating the country." — Stuart paints Trumbull's portrait. — The Washington Monument Association. — Binon the sculptor at Boston. — Collaborates with Stuart in bust of Washington. — His bust of John Adams. — Opinion of Adams on art in America. — His remarkable letter. — Stuart paints Rufus King. — Paints Commodore Perry. — Revisits Newport. — Disenchantment. — Arthur Browne on Rhode Island. — The Redwood Library. — Jarvis the painter at Boston. — Stuart's palette. — Chester Harding. — Bye-laws at Boston. — Licensed artists! — Painting John Adams at Quincy. — Verses on picture by Jane Stuart. — "Something Raphael vainly sought." — Rembrandt Peale's Dream of Love.

XI. BOSTON, 1824 175-185

The Senate and copyright. — Stuart and Peale. — One of Peale's testimonials. — Shaw the Athenaeum Secretary. — Stuart and Shaw's portrait. — How it was painted.

— Stuart's execution. — Lafayette at Boston. — His portrait by Stuart proposed. — Stuart's five Presidents. — Portraits of Washington. — Circular from the American Academy of Arts. — List of the portraits from life. — The circular a veiled attack on Rembrandt Peale's Washington. — How he painted it. — Washington's false teeth. — Letter from Rembrandt Peale. — The teeth and Stuart. — "A set of sea-horse ivory." — Stuart on Washington's portraits. — Houdon's the best. — The opinion of Custis. — The portrait by Sharples.

XII. BOSTON, 1825 186-201

The Bunker Hill Monument. — Stuart and Greenough. — Longacre's diary. — Glimpses of Stuart at home. — Stuart's daughters. — Neagle paints Stuart. — "A bobbish picture." — Portrait praised by Allston. — John Quincy Adams sits again. — Hart's discreditable story of Stuart. — Stuart dines with the Mayor of Boston. — Tells stories of sitting to West. — Browere the sculptor. — Takes life mask of Stuart. — Stuart's certificate. — James Hubbard the profile cutter. — Studies under Stuart. — Failure of Samuel Williams. — Boston disturbed. — His creditors sell the Lansdowne Washington. — The portrait's later history. — Its originality challenged by Hart. — Strong evidence in its favour. — Stuart's certificate of its originality. — The witnesses identified. — Samuel Williams not "an English merchant." — Member of a well-known Boston family. — United States consul in London. — The friend of Washington Irving, Ticknor, and Allston. — Samuel Williams at home.

XIII. BOSTON, 1826-1828 202-223

Chantrey's statue of Washington and Stuart's portrait. — Quality of Stuart's later work. — His trembling hand. — West and the camera lucida. — The first exhibition at the Athenaeum. — Stuart exhibits in New York. — His powers failing. — Meets Mrs. Basil Hall. — Last portraits. — He dies in poverty. — Allston's letter and obituary. — The Boston Evening Gazette. — Its sketch of Stuart's career. — Testimonial of the Philadelphia artists. — Memorial exhibition of Stuart's work. — His self-portraits. — Stuart's house in Essex Street offered for sale. — Description of the house. — The Athenaeum buys Washington's portrait. — Stuart and Ticknor. — Mrs. Stuart settles at Newport. — Stuart's twelve children. — Charles Stuart, landscape painter. — Mrs. Stebbins. — Jane Stuart. — Her early promise unfulfilled. — Lack of training. — Stuart's great powers. — Were they fully displayed? — Morse on the neglect of American artists. — The Southern Review. — A criticism of Stuart by Allston? — Dunlap on Stuart's character.

BIBLIOGRAPHY 225-228

INDEX 229-240