Dalai Lama

Brady Whitters

"Dalai Lama" is a title given to the spiritual and temporal leaders of Tibet starting with the Third Dalai Lama, Sonam Gyatso (1543–1588), and including, posthumously, the two prior leaders and those following. Tibetan Buddhists believe each Dalai Lama is part of an unbroken chain of reincarnations of the bodhisattva, Avalokitesvara. The current Dalai Lama, Tenzin Gyatso (b. 1935), is the fourteenth in the lineage.

traditional Christian scriptures" (Tenzin: 48). He also commented on the "striking stylistic similarities between the Christian and Buddhist scriptures" (Tenzin: 53). The Dalai Lama’s willingness to engage Christian Scriptures reveals his tolerance and respect for non-Buddhist faiths and their texts, but with this openness he also stresses the importance of maintaining the uniqueness of the world’s religions lest we try to reduce everything and then "have nothing left to show that is distinct about our specific traditions" (Tenzin: 73).

A Christian community arose in Delphi only a century after the demise of the cult of Apollo. It was probably a diocesan town from the 5th century on, but seems to have been abandoned in the 7th century.

Delphi

Rainer Hirsch-Luipold, Barbara Hirsch

Situated north of the Corinthian gulf in mainland Greece in the middle of the steep rugged mountain side of Mt. Parnassus, this Phocian city with the famous oracle and sanctuary of Apollo is a place where myth and history meet like the two mythic eagles sent out by Zeus from Mt. Olympus in opposition.

Search Help EBR Online
Search
To search the database EBR Online enter your search term(s) into the entry fields in the search form on the left-hand side of the screen. Three entry fields are available, each of them preset with a search criterion. You can select a different search criterion from the list available for each entry field. The result of your search is always an encyclopedic article.

The following search criteria are available:
- Full Text: searches through the full text of all entries in the database. With this search criterion you will receive a multitude of hits, because you always search through the full entries. To perform a more targeted search, please use one of the other search criteria.
- Title: with this search criterion you can search titles of articles within EBR.
