ICL JOURNAL
Vienna Journal on International Constitutional Law
Ed. by Christoph Bezemek, Harald Eberhard, Claudia Fuchs

Objective
The Vienna Journal on International Constitutional Law (ICL Journal) is dedicated to the advancement of legal knowledge in the field of International Constitutional Law. Advised by a body of distinguished jurists the Journal publishes high-standard peer-reviewed contributions by scholars and legal professionals from around the globe.

Topics
- European Constitutional Law
- Public International Law
- Constitutionalization of International Law
- Internationalization of Constitutional Law
- Migration of Constitutional Ideas
- Legal Theory
- Comparative Constitutional Law.

By linking these select perspectives the Journal endorses an approach towards a coherent understanding of International Constitutional Law, thus preparing the ground for novel answers to the challenges of a changing global legal framework. The Journal addresses the global scientific community, scholars and researchers in various disciplines working in the field of International Constitutional Law. Moreover, the Journal provides information on recent constitutional developments relevant to practitioners as well as academics, particularly by monitoring the case law of Constitutional Courts in Central and Eastern Europe.
