

collecting permit requests. Their efforts significantly enhanced the coverage of the work.

Principal financial support for this work came from two awards from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Forest Services, Forest Health Technology Enterprise Team (Cooperative agreements 01-CA-11244225-215 and 10-CA-11420004-130). Additional support, lodging, and other assistance came from Discover Life in America's "All Taxa Biodiversity Inventory" in Great Smoky Mountains National Park. Special thanks to Jeanie Hilten, Keith Langdon, and Becky Nichols who coordinated visits; Keith and Becky also accompanied us on outings, contributed samples, and poured on encouragement. Contracts from the Connecticut Department of Environmental Protection Long Island Sound Fund, Endangered Species/Wildlife Income Tax Check-off Fund, and State Wildlife Grants program, and from the Connecticut Chapter of The Nature Conservancy added dozens of species to this effort that otherwise would have been missed. An award from the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences at the University of Connecticut offset publication costs, and a second award from UConn's Research Foundation funded the preparation of artwork. We thank our wives, Sylvia, Terry, Ashley, and Ann. Without their support this book, and especially much of the fieldwork and rearing efforts that are the foundation for this work, would not have been possible.

PHOTOGRAPHIC CREDITS

The 2250 images that illustrate this work were taken over two decades by more than 100 photographers. Professional taxonomists, career entomologists, amateur collectors, students, foresters, extension agents, conservation biologists, and a small legion of nature photographers contributed. Many of those that sent images have become and will long remain colleagues and friends—we are fortunate indeed to have been able to work with so many. Credits are broken down by category below.

Two-thirds of the larval images were taken by DLW and many of the remaining by students or technicians working in DLW's lab (Hartan, Herrick, Hohn, Hossler, Jacobs, Joseph, McLoud, Robinson, Rota, Rymysz, Simmonds, Suddapalli, and Zacharczenko). Seventy-three people or institutes contributed larval images for this book. Cover credits appear elsewhere. Locality and other data associated with each image are posted on the senior author's website (<http://press.princeton.edu/titles/9420.html>). We are much indebted to April Rodd, Tegan Wheeler, Sabina Perkins, and especially April for assembling, transcribing, and synthesizing the collection and image credit data for each of these images.

Of special significance are the numerous contributions of Don Lafontaine at the Canadian National Collection and Tim McCabe at the State Museum of New York, who allowed us to use images of numerous species that have not been previously published, several of which represent unusual, rare, or otherwise poorly known taxa. Valerie Giles was an early catalyst for DLW's interest in macrolepidopteran caterpillars—hundreds of her images taken between 1994 and 1997 anchor this effort. Lyle Buss was generous with his time and images, and substantially bolstered our representation of Spodoptera armyworms. Those contributing larval images to the body of this book are listed individually alphabetically below.
