

Contents

- 1 Introduction — 1
  - 1.1. Theology of music — 1
  - 1.2. Music and Luther studies — 3
  - 1.3. The relationship between music and the Word of God in previous scholarship — 9
  - 1.4. The aim, method and sources of the present study — 13

- 2 Voluptates aurium: the pleasures of music in Antiquity and the Middle Ages — 19
  - 2.1 Song of the heart: the appreciation of music in the early church — 19
  - 2.2 Evaluation of aural pleasures in Augustine — 24
    - 2.2.1 The temporal and eternal numbers of De Musica — 24
    - 2.2.2 The scruples of Confessions — 28
    - 2.2.3 The importance of delight — 30
  - 2.3 The development of the concept of music from speculation to practice — 32
    - 2.3.1 The Mathematical concept of music: Boethius and his legacy — 32
    - 2.3.2 High medieval ideas: Bernard of Clairvaux and Thomas Aquinas — 37
    - 2.3.3 Fifteenth century musical theology: Jean Gerson and Johannes Tinctoris — 42
  - 2.4 Medieval theological aesthetics — 52
    - 2.4.1 Theological treatment of beauty — 52
    - 2.4.2 The aesthetics of proportion — 54
    - 2.4.3 The aesthetics of light — 57
    - 2.4.4 Some traits of Renaissance aesthetics — 59
  - 2.5 The Medieval theory of affects — 62
    - 2.5.1 The problematic affectivity — 62
    - 2.5.2 Defining affects — 63
    - 2.5.3 Evaluating affects — 65

- 3 Optimum Dei donum – the essence of music — 70
  - 3.1 Gift (donum) in Luther's theology — 71
    - 3.1.1 To be God is to give — 71
    - 3.1.2 To receive is to participate — 76
    - 3.1.3 To be given is to give back — 79
    - 3.1.4 The gifts of humans as the gifts of God — 81

- 3.2 Music as a gift of God — 84
  - 3.2.1 The four-stage division of music — 84
    - 3.2.1.1 The phenomenon of sound — 85
    - 3.2.1.2 Music of nature: birdsong in particular — 87
    - 3.2.1.3 The human voice — 89
    - 3.2.1.4 Art music — 93
  - 3.2.2 The excellence of music as a gift of God — 95
  - 3.2.3 The reciprocity of the gift of music: Praise. — 97
    - 3.2.3.1 Singing praise as Christian service — 97
    - 3.2.3.2 Critical comments on music — 101
    - 3.2.3.2 Eschatological and ecstatic dimensions of praise — 103

- 4 Domina et gubernatrix affectuum humanorum – the power of music — 106
  - 4.1 The affects in Luther’s thinking — 107
    - 4.1.1 The affectivity of Luther’s theology — 107
    - 4.1.2 The affect and emotions — 113
  - 4.2 The affective power of music — 117
    - 4.2.1 Music moves the human heart — 117
    - 4.2.2 Music raises a variety of emotions — 119
    - 4.2.3 Above all, music delights the human heart — 120
    - 4.2.4 Canticum novum as the song of joy — 124
  - 4.3 Music combined with the Word of God — 127
    - 4.3.1 Verbum vocale as the primary form of the Word — 127
    - 4.3.2 Das Wort im Schwang: Singing as the optimal form of verbum vocale — 132

- 5 Joy (gaudium) and Pleasure (voluptas) in Luther’s theology — 137
  - 5.1 Joy — 138
    - 5.1.1 The Gospel is good news — 138
    - 5.1.2 Characteristics of Christian joy — 139
    - 5.1.3 Joy and love — 142
  - 5.2 Pleasure — 146
    - 5.2.1 Pleasure and will — 146
    - 5.2.2 Holy pleasure — 152
  - 5.3.3 Sensuous pleasures in Luther’s thinking. — 156
  - 5.3 The delight of music is sensuous and innocent — 161

- 6 Theology of beauty and the virtues of music — 162
  - 6.1 Luther as an aesthetic thinker — 163

- 6.1.1 Luther and beauty — 163
- 6.1.2 Young Luther and the beauty of the cross — 165
- 6.1.3 Old Luther and appreciation of outward beauty — 170
- 6.2 In search of the aesthetical criteria of music — 173
  - 6.2.1 Simplicitas – communicativeness — 175
  - 6.2.2 Libertas – freedom — 178
  - 6.2.3 Suavitas – pleasantness — 184
    - 6.2.3.1 Excursus: A comparison of the way Calvin and Luther value music — 186
  - 6.2.4 Exultatio – the creative joy — 189
- 6.3 Luther’s musical aesthetics as an aesthetics of light — 194

Conclusion — 199

Abbreviations — 206

Sources — 207

- Martin Luther’s works — 207
- Ancient and medieval authors — 209

Literature — 213

Subject Index — 225

Index of Names — 226