Contents

Acknowledgements v
Tables xii
Figures xiv

Introduction 1

Part I: Synchrony

Chapter 1
A functional-cognitive model of the English NP 13
1.1. The functional make-up of the English NP 15
  1.1.1. Halliday’s structural-functional account 15
  1.1.2. Bache’s functional zone model 18
  1.1.3. Langacker’s cognitive-functional account 21
  1.1.4. A functional-cognitive model of the English NP 23
1.2. Categorization 25
  1.2.1. The head of the NP 26
  1.2.2. Subcategorization 27
1.3. Modification 28
  1.3.1. Descriptive modification 29
    1.3.1.1. Objective and subjective descriptive modifiers 30
    1.3.1.2. Bounded, unbounded and extreme descriptive modifiers 33
  1.3.2. Degree modification 34
    1.3.2.1. Adjective-intensification 35
    1.3.2.2. Noun-intensification 36
    1.3.2.3. Structural-semantic types of degree modification 38
    1.3.2.4. Degree modification and subjectivity 41
1.4. Determination 44
  1.4.1. Primary determination 46
  1.4.2. Secondary determination 47
Chapter 2
The English NP: Structure, order and the role of (inter)subjectivity

2.1. The English NP: A mere modifier-head structure?  51
2.2. A semantic, linear subjective-objective model?  55
  2.2.1. Langackerian subjectivity  56
  2.2.2. Intersubjectivity in Cognitive Grammar  57
  2.2.3. Traugottian subjectivity and beyond  59
  2.2.4. Traugottian intersubjectivity and beyond  62
  2.2.5. Textual meanings and (inter)subjectivity  64
  2.2.6. Subjectivity and intersubjectivity: Disentangling the web  69
  2.2.7. Challenging the linear subjective-objective model  71
2.3. A prosodic, field-like model  73

Part II: Diachrony

Chapter 3
(Inter)subjectification and grammaticalization: Pathways of change in the English NP  81

3.1. Subjectification and intersubjectification  81
3.2. Grammaticalization  86
  3.2.1. Onset contexts of grammaticalization  90
    3.2.1.1. Ambiguity  90
    3.2.1.2. Specialized contexts: Dialogicity and collocation  92
3.3. The directionality of (inter)subjectification and grammaticalization  96
3.4. (Inter)subjectification and grammaticalization in the English NP  98
  3.4.1. From description to secondary determination  98
  3.4.2. Pathways to noun-intensification  101
    3.4.2.1. Pathway 1: From description to noun-intensification  101
    3.4.2.2. Pathway 2: From identification to noun-intensification  103
  3.4.3. Adamson’s lefward and rightward movement hypotheses  106
3.5. Conclusions  107
Part III: The case studies

Chapter 4
Data and Methods
4.1. Selection of the data 113
4.2. Corpora 115
   4.2.1. Old English 116
   4.2.2. Middle English 116
   4.2.3. Modern English 116
   4.2.4. Present Day English 117
4.3. Methodology 119

Chapter 5
The completeness adjectives 123
5.1. Complete 125
   5.1.1. Descriptive modifier uses of complete 125
      5.1.1.1. Bounded descriptive modifier uses of complete 125
      5.1.1.2. Descriptive modifier uses of complete, vague between bounded and unbounded construal 128
   5.1.2. Identifying uses of complete 130
   5.1.3. Noun-intensifying uses of complete 135
      5.1.3.1. Closed scale noun-intensifying uses 135
      5.1.3.2. Noun-intensifying uses hovering between an open scale and a closed scale reading 139
   5.1.4. Adjective-intensifying uses of complete 141
   5.1.5. From description to identification and noun-intensification 142
5.2. Total 145
   5.2.1. Bounded descriptive modifier uses of total 146
   5.2.2. Identifying uses of total 148
   5.2.3. Noun-intensifying uses of total 151
   5.2.4. Adjective-intensifying uses of total 156
   5.2.5. Classifying uses of total 156
   5.2.6. From description to identification and noun-intensification 157
5.3. Whole 159
   5.3.1. Descriptive modifier uses of whole 160
      5.3.1.1. Bounded descriptive modifier uses of whole 160
      5.3.1.2. Bounded/unbounded descriptive modifier uses of whole 162
5.3.2. Identifying uses of whole
5.3.3. Noun-intensifying uses of whole
  5.3.3.1. Closed scale noun-intensifying uses
  5.3.3.2. Open scale noun-intensifying uses
5.3.4. Adjective-intensifying uses of whole
5.3.5. From description to identification to noun-intensification
5.4. Conclusions

Chapter 6
The specificity adjectives
6.1. Unbounded descriptive modifier uses of particular and specific
  6.1.1. Objective descriptive modifier uses
  6.1.2. Subjective descriptive modifier uses
6.2. Identifying uses of particular and specific
  6.2.1. Linking secondary determiner uses
  6.2.2. Individuating secondary determiner uses
  6.2.3. Focusing secondary determiner uses
  6.2.4. The development of secondary determiner uses
6.3. Noun-intensifying uses of particular
  6.3.1. The development of noun-intensifying particular
    6.3.1.1. The emphatic linking construction
    6.3.1.2. The negative quantifying construction
  6.3.2. Collocational evidence for the shift from identification to noun-intensification
6.4. Classifying uses of specific
6.5. From description to identification (to noun-intensification)

Chapter 7
Such, zul k and what
7.1. Identifying such
  7.1.1. Type-phoricity
  7.1.2. Generalized instantiation
  7.1.3. Definiteness and indefiniteness in conflict
7.2. Noun-intensifying such
  7.2.1. Semantic-pragmatic types of noun-intensification expressed by such 7.2.2. Collocational behaviour of noun-intensifying such
7.3. The diachronic relation between identifying and noun-intensifying such 231
7.4. A contrastive study of English such and Dutch zulk 234
  7.4.1. Identifying zulk 235
  7.4.2. Noun-intensifying zulk 237
  7.4.3. From identification to noun-intensification ... and back 238
7.5. A comparative study of English such and what 242
  7.5.1. Identifying what: an interrogative primary determiner 243
  7.5.2. Noun-intensifying what 244
    7.5.2.1. Semantic-pragmatic types of noun-intensification 244
    7.5.2.2. Collocational behaviour 246
    7.5.2.3. Syntactic behaviour 246
  7.5.3. Identification and noun-intensification: A fuzzy boundary 248
  7.5.4. Such and what: A synchronic comparison 250
7.6. Conclusions 252

Chapter 8

Old and little: subjective compounds 253
  8.1. Subjective compounds with old 256
    8.1.1. General characterization 256
    8.1.2. The development of subjective compounds with old 261
  8.2. Subjective compounds with little 266
    8.2.1. General characterization 266
    8.2.2. The development of subjective compounds with little 268
  8.3. Objective compounds with old and little 271
  8.4. Subjective compounds and their repercussions for subjectivity and subjectification in the NP 273

Summary
Towards a reconciliation of synchrony and diachrony 277

References 287
Subject index 305