

Call For Papers for the Special Issue of BEJM on

The Macroeconomic Implications of the Covid-19 Pandemic

The Covid-19 pandemic changed all our lives in many ways in a matter of weeks. Households, firms, the public sector, governments and supranational institutions all face new challenges to perform their “normal” activities. These individual responses aggregate up towards the macroeconomic implication at the regional, national and global level. At all these levels, several unprecedented policies were introduced to mitigate the effects of the pandemic and to prevent a major and persistent economic downturn.

The BE Journal of Macroeconomics (BEJM) is one of the leading journals of macroeconomics. BEJM is announcing a special issue on the “Macroeconomic Implications of the Covid-19 Pandemic”. We are welcoming papers that study theoretically and/or empirically the macroeconomic consequences and policy aspects of the current pandemic. The submitted papers will go through a fast peer-review process and expected to be published in early 2021. We are going to review papers through two rounds. The deadline for the first round is October 1 and the deadline for the second round is December 15.

You can submit your papers through Manuscript Central.
<https://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/dgbejm>

Please indicate you’re submitting for the special issue on your cover letter.

The editors:

Árpád Ábrahám, Eva Carceles-Poveda, Tiago Cavalcanti, Juan-Carlos Hatchondo, Evi Pappa, Felipe Schwartzman, Peng-Fei Wang