Call for Papers

For the upcoming issue of arcadia the editors cordially invite contributions: articles and book reviews.

Aims and Scope:

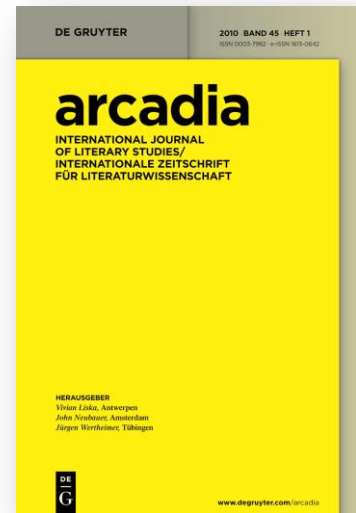

arcadia is a biannual peer-reviewed international, intercultural and interdisciplinary journal that welcomes reflexive and informed comparative and critical approaches to literary works, films, theatre plays, to social, political, cultural, visual and media phenomena, to translations, literary and cultural migrations and transfers as well as to theoretical, methodological and philosophical questions. It publishes contributions in German, English, and French from all over the world and keeps its pages open to a broad variety of theories and methods. It fosters innovation, recontextualization and reconceptualization derived from a confrontation between different, and often asymmetric, national, cultural, gendered, economic, geopolitical, intellectual, disciplinary and institutional settings.

Next to the proposals for thematic clusters and special issues, the journal also invites independent articles by both eminent and emerging scholars. After an initial editorial screening, submissions undergo a blind review process by an international advisory board and other experts in the field.

Editorial Board:

Ziva Ben-Porat (Tel Aviv), Hendrik Birus (Bremen), Shang Biwu (Shanghai), Remo Ceserani (Bologna), David Damrosch (Cambridge, MA), Manfred Engel (Saarbrücken), Angela Esterhammer (Toronto), Monika Fludernik (Freiburg), Walid Hamarneh (Richmond, VA), Margaret Higonnet (Storrs, CT), Geert Lernout (Antwerpen), Alain Montandon (Clermont-Ferrand), Sowon Park (Oxford), Mihály Szegedy-Maszák (Budapest), Galin Tihanov (London), Mario Valdés (Toronto)

Submissions prepared in Word format and MLA Referencing Style should be sent to the editorial office of arcadia, Ivana Perica (ivana.perica@univie.ac.at). The arcadia Style Sheet is available at <http://www.degruyter.com/view/j/arca>. Submitted papers should contain between 20 000 and 60 000 characters. They should not be submitted elsewhere, should not constitute chapters of finished or nearly finished dissertations, and should not have been published in another major language. Articles may be written in German, English, and French. Authors whose articles are not in their native language are strongly advised to have their manuscript checked by a native speaker. Stylistically and grammatically incorrect articles will not be considered.
