

Journal of Citizenship and Globalisation Studies
Special issue/section proposal

We welcome proposals for special issues or special sections that address our journal aims. Please complete this proposal form and return as an email attachment to jenny.lucy@deakin.edu.au

About the Journal:

The Journal of Citizenship and Globalisation Studies (JCGS) is interested in the complex and often contradictory meanings of citizenship, social inclusion and globalisation at the local, national and transnational levels.

To this end JCGS publishes high-quality innovative empirical and theoretical papers that critically engage with:

- emergent practices of community and citizenship at multiple levels of social life;
- tensions and innovations in contemporary practices of governance, security and democracy around the world;
- the plural and contested constructions and claims of identity within and between complex societies;
- the ways heritage and (material as well as intangible) culture elicit contestation and dissonance, as well as different modes of being in the world today;
- the nexus between discrimination and disparity, and its impact on development and human rights;
- uncovering theory, policy and practice necessary for the achievement of social justice.

JCGS is multidisciplinary and welcomes submissions from: sociology; anthropology; political science; philosophy; history; development studies; migration studies; international relations; postcolonial studies; education, and others that addresses the journal's scope above. JCGS is also a global publication, which aims to contribute to the construction of global knowledges; unconstrained by borders or boundaries. It particularly welcomes submissions that adopt transnational, intercultural and international frames and methods.

Special issues (or sections) speak to one or more of these criteria, providing focused critical engagement on a given subject.

Special issues are comprised of seven to eight original articles (7000–8000 words) and one guest editorial critical introduction (3000 words).

Special sections are comprised of three to four original articles (7000–8000 words) and one guest editorial critical introduction (3000 words).

As guest editor(s), it is understood that you will:

1. Solicit and vet approximately 8 articles of relevance for consideration in the special issue or 3-4 articles for a special section.
2. Undertake the majority of contributor liaison, including advising authors of review outcomes and necessary revisions.
3. Check revised articles to ensure quality and that authors have addressed referee concerns and JCGS style notes. Edit articles for language.
4. Provide a substantial critical introduction (approximately 3000 words) for the special issue/section.

Peer reviewing, final copy-editing and proofing of the issue will be organised/undertaken by members of the editorial team and the associate editor.

Journal of Citizenship and Globalisation Studies: Special Issue Proposal

Please complete this proposal form and return as an email attachment to jenny.lucy@deakin.edu.au

DATE OF PROPOSAL:

Please indicate whether you are proposing a Special Issue or a Special Section

Proposed title (must be clear and concise):

Editor/s and position/affiliation:

Please list the guest editor(s) names in the order you would like them to appear.

Editor 1:

Editor 2:

Editor 3:

MANUSCRIPT CONTENTS

Please provide a provisional listing of your special issue, including author names, article titles, and approximate length of each article. If the guest editor[s] will not be writing the Introduction, please indicate the person who will be doing this.

[CUT AND PASTE PROVISIONAL CONTENTS IN HERE]

TOTAL Length of manuscript (number of words):

Tables/maps/illustrations should be kept to a minimum. Please estimate the number of these:

Expected delivery date of articles for peer review:

DESCRIPTION OF CONTENTS:

Please provide a 200 word summary about this special issue, including why it is particularly relevant to this journal.

Please provide article titles and abstracts of proposed contents along with author details

Description of editor(s)

Please provide brief author notes (approx. 200 words) for each of the proposed guest editors, including previous editing projects and key publications.

CONTACT INFORMATION:

EDITOR for correspondence:

Address:

Phone:

Email: