Contents

Acknowledgements — VII
Abstract — VIII
List of tables and figures — XI
Notes on citations and tables — XI
Preface — 1

1 Peirce's Semeiotic and the Living Sign — 7
  1.1 What is a Sign? — 7
  1.2 One, two, three: a few sundry notes on triads, phenomenology, and the categories — 14
  1.3 Nine sign divisions and ten sign classes — 19
  1.4 The Decalogue: how signs grow — 22
  1.5 A Body Awakes — 27
  1.6 Icons, Photography, and Mimicry — 29
  1.7 Dialogue, index, and dynamic object — 31
  1.8 Habit and the growth of the symbol — 38
  1.9 Inner dialogue, self-control, and dissent — 41

2 Parallel Developments and Divergences — 47
  2.1 New Dialogues — 47
  2.2 Documentary as Text? — 55
  2.3 Theorising Practice — 62

3 Rupture, Dissent, and Conflict in the Cinema of Jon Jost — 67
  3.1 Introduction — 67
  3.2 Me, You, and We in Jon Jost’s Speaking Directly — 69
  3.2.1 Violence and Authority — 74
  3.2.2 Inner dialogue and semeiotic autonomy — 77
  3.3 London Brief: Conformity and War — 81
  3.4 Passages: Apage and Sacrifice — 88

4 War and biophilia in the cinema of Johan van der Keuken — 99
  4.1 Introduction — 99
  4.2 Herman Slobbe: the pain of growth — 103
  4.3 Ecology and self-control in the The Flat Jungle — 110
  4.3.1 Greed and Animosity — 117
Contents

4.4  Face Value: Love and Death in the City  121
4.4.1  History as Outward Clash  127
4.4.2  Global War and Media  130
4.4.3  Love Cycles  132

5  Terror and love in the cinema of Rithy Panh  142
5.1  Introduction  142
5.2  Love, chance, and hope in The Land of the Wandering Souls  146
5.3  Self-cultivation and Reconstruction in S21: The Khmer Rouge Killing Machine  158

Conclusion  179

References  185

Index  195