Contents

Part 1: Quality Journalism under Pressure
Stephan Russ-Mohl, Heinz-Werner Nienstedt, Bartosz Wilczek
Journalism and media convergence
An introduction — 3

Robert G. Picard
Killing journalism?
The economics of media convergence — 19

Gabriele Siegert
From “the end of advertising as we know it” to “beyond content”?
Changes in advertising and the impact on journalistic media — 29

Part 2: Financing Journalism in the Future
Heinz-Werner Nienstedt, Bettina Lis
More money from media consumers
Paid content and the German newspaper case — 43

Konny Gellenbeck
Investing in “return on political income”
How the tageszeitung was saved from bankruptcy — 57

Harry Browne
The promise and threat of foundation-funded journalism
A critical examination of three case studies — 63

Joachim Meinhold
Resisting crisis rhetoric in financing journalism
A managerial and customer oriented standpoint — 79
Part 3: PR, Journalism, and Convergence

Klaus Kocks
Exercising public influence
The interdependent system of public relations and journalism — 93

Barbara Baerns
A changing interplay?
Public relations and journalism in a converging media world — 101

Marcello Foa
Journalists know little about spin doctors: This is the problem!
How the news agenda is infiltrated by hidden propaganda — 111

Part 4: Search Engines and Social Media

Christoph Neuberger
Competition or complementarity?
Journalism, social network sites, and news search engines — 119

Peter Laufer
Crowdsourcing is nothing new
Professional journalists are still needed to determine what is news — 131

Oliver Quiring
Journalists must rethink their roles
Social media – an opportunity for newsrooms comes with obligation — 137

Part 5: Conclusions

Stephan Russ-Mohl
Journalism’s neglected self-inspection
Final remarks — 151

Bibliography — 157

Authors and editors — 169