

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Over the years of my research and writing I have enjoyed working with some professionals who have contributed significantly to this book. I wish to thank, first and foremost, Professor Eli Shaltiel for his insights and remarks; Bina Pe'er, my meticulous language editor; Am Oved editor Nir Baram, who gave helpful advice from his experience as a writer; Yaron Sadan, the CEO of Am Oved Publishing, who supported me in the process of writing and translating; and my PhD mentor, Professor Giora Goldberg, who instilled confidence in me as to the final outcome of the text.

Thanks to Professor Yaakov Shavit for his advice on the first chapters; to minister Dan Meridor, who spent many hours in conversations with me; and to Shlomo Lev-Ami, who passed away in 2011 but had the chance to share his experiences with me as the last of the surviving figures who were part of the Etzel headquarters.

The translation process would not have been successful without the dedicated work of Danielle Zilberberg and Yoram Sharett, whose vast knowledge and expertise improved the English version. I also wish to thank my agent, Linda Langton, who believed in this book, and the editors at Yale University Press—Sarah Miller, Christina Tucker, and Bojana Ristich.

Finally, thanks to my devoted and beloved family.

This book is dedicated to my wife, Lior, the love of my life; without her all this would mean nothing.