Contents

Acknowledgments vii

Introduction ix

1. Emerging Markets Crises and Policy Responses 1
   The pre-crisis period 1
   The crisis 7
   IMF reforms, regulatory changes, and private sector innovations 18

2. The Economists' Views 23
   Consensus view 23
   Conflicting advice and the topsy-turvy principle 29
   "Unrealistic" encroachments of sovereignty 36
   Theories 36

3. Outline of the Argument and Main Message 47
   The problem of a standard borrower 48
   Why is external borrowing different? 48
   Institutional and policy responses to market failure 50

4. Liquidity and Risk-Management in a Closed Economy 53
   Corporate financing: key organizing principles 53
   Domestic liquidity provision 70

5. Identification of Market Failure: Are Debtor Countries Ordinary Borrowers? 77
   The analogy and a few potential differences 77
   A dual-agency perspective 81
   The government's incentives 86
   Discussion 88
   A common-agency perspective 92
6. Implications of the Dual- and Common-Agency Perspectives
   Implication 1: the representation hypothesis 97
   Implication 2: policy analysis 102
   Cross-country comparisons 108
   Is there a need for an international lender of last resort? 110

7. Institutional Implications: What Role for the IMF? 113
   From market failure to mission design 114
   Governance 116

8. Conclusion 129

References 131

Index 145