Acknowledgments

First and foremost, I would like to thank the people of Yap who so generously accepted me into their lives and who shared their cares, concerns, and understandings of what it means to lead a life the Yapese way. Sirov ngoomied ma karamagaergad! For reasons of confidentiality I cannot directly name all of the individuals whose insights have informed this work. I hope, however, that my deep appreciation for the time, trust, and confidence that my numerous Yapese teachers, friends, and family gave to me is evident in the pages that follow.

Of those I can mention by name, I would like to thank the following individuals for being such patient teachers: Bomtom, Charles Chieng, Carmen Chigiy, Martin Dugchur, Charles Falmeyog, Al Fanechigiy, Henry Fangalbuw, Peter Fatamag, Ansilem Filmed, Francis Filmed, Stan Filmed, Gisog, Guper, Gurwan, Laguar, Basil Limed, James Lukan, Claudius Maffel, John Mangfel, Cyprian J. Manmaw, Agnus Marlee, Martina Gisog, Thomas Mo’on, Dr. Victor Ngodan, Leo Pugram, Lourdes Roboman, Ruw, John Tamag, Padre Thal, John Thinum, Elvira Tinag, Peter Tun, John Wayan, Cyril Yinfal, and Julie Yuru. I was also very fortunate to have had two extremely knowledgeable and gifted language teachers in Francisca Mochen and Taman Kamnaanged. And I am indebted beyond words to my research assistants, Sheri Manna and Stella Tiningin.

Given that this project has taken nearly a decade to complete, there are many individuals, institutions, and agencies that have played key roles in helping out along the way. Of these, I would first like to respectfully mention the Council of Pilung and the Yap State Historic...
Preservation Office. I am very thankful for the generous support granted by various staff members at the Yap State Memorial Hospital; the Yap State Department of Education; the College of Micronesia, Yap State Campus; the Yap State Archives; and MARC at the University of Guam.

I would like to acknowledge my appreciation of funding granted through the Department of Anthropology at UCLA and the Social Science Research Council and Andrew W. Mellon Foundation’s International Dissertation Field Research Fellowship Program. I am also very grateful for receiving a UC Faculty Development Grant that allowed me a quarter off from teaching in the fall of 2008 to work on the final draft of this book.

There are many scholars who have generously contributed directly to the ideas that are developed in the following pages. That the boundaries between friendship, mentorship, and scholarship are thankfully fluid ones, I owe a deep heartfelt thanks to: Keira Ballantyne, Niko Besnier, David Brent, Carole Browner, Bob Desjarlais, Nalini Devdas, Jay Dobbin, Jennifer Dornan, Alessandro Duranti, Jim Egan, Nicole Falgoust, Angela Garcia, Linda Garro, Kevin Groark, Douglas Hollan, Uffe Juul Jensen, Charles Laughlin, Mary Lawlor, Sherwood Lingenfelter, Ted Lowe, Cheryl Mattingly, Jill Mitchell, Amira Mittermaier, Keith Murphy, Angela Nonaka, Masaru Noritake, Justin Richland, Joel Robbins, Don Rubenstein, Elinor Ochs, Warren Throop, and Sarah Willen. In addition, I would like to thank two of my graduate students, Mara Buchbinder and Hanna Garth, for reading over and commenting on an earlier draft of the book. I would also like to acknowledge the very helpful comments of three anonymous reviewers. Finally, I owe a great amount of gratitude to my editor Reed Malcolm for his support and many insightful suggestions throughout this process.

Parts of the book benefited greatly from questions and comments arising from presentations given to the Department of Anthropology, the Meta-Epistemology Seminar, and the Mind, Medicine, and Culture Seminar at UCLA; the Department of Anthropology and the Psychodynamic Seminar at UCSD; the Department of Anthropology and the Department of Occupational Therapy and Occupational Science at USC; the Culture, Life Course, and Mental Health Workshop at the Department of Human Development at the University of Chicago; and UCLA’s Center for the Interdisciplinary Study and Treatment of Pain. I thank all of the organizers and participants for giving me such insightful feedback and critique.
There are many friends I would like to thank who were there for me through thick and thin during the research and writing of this book. The most sincere gratitude and love to: Tej Bhatia-Herring, Alex Burke, Melanie Cua, Alex Dakoglou, Keith Ellard, Kirk Ellard, Tim Gideon, Matt Goforth, Matt Harrell, Michael Herring, Phillip Lipscomb, Matthew Minter, Susanne Rattigan, Joshua Thompson, and all of the members of the Bar Ethnography and Sushi Tuesday collectives!

Finally, I owe perhaps the greatest debt of all to my families, both my adopted Yapese family and my Canadian family. To all of my parents, grandparents, siblings, and cousins, the suffering that went into bringing this book into being was for you.

Jason Throop
Los Angeles, California

Selected parts of the introduction and conclusion are drawn from an extensive reworking of the previously published article “Articulating Experience,” Anthropological Theory 3, no. 2 (2003): 219–41.

This page intentionally left blank