Acknowledgments

This book, having had a lengthy gestation period, owes a great deal to a number of people. First and foremost, thanks are due to Lynette Hunter, my PhD supervisor at the University of Leeds, for her guidance, her support, and for never saying no to any of my ideas but always holding them to account, making this a better project, and me a better scholar. Thanks also to Shirley Chew, Graham Huggan, and Diana Brydon for their comments and questions. For financial assistance during my doctoral studies, thanks to the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council, the British Council, and the University of Leeds.

This book has since followed me to three other institutions, the University of Western Ontario, Leeds Metropolitan University, and the University of Nottingham. Many thanks to colleagues in these departments, especially Jessica Schagerl, Susan Watkins, Sue Chaplin, Mary Eagleton, Ruth Robbins, and Susan Billingham for their support as this project evolved into its different incarnations. I owe countless friends on both sides of the Atlantic for their moral and intellectual support and their lively conversation: thanks especially to Catherine Bates, Lee Carruthers, Carmen Ellison, Corinne Fowler, Anna Greenwood-Lee, Caroline Herbert, Kaley Kramer, Nasser Hussain, Eric Langley, Donna McCormack, Jeffrey Orr, Edel Porter, David Stirrup, Charles Tepperman, Darrelle Villa, Abigail Ward, Jayne Waterman, Dominic Williams, Ingrid Young, Patricia Young, and Terence Young. A particular thank you to Catherine, Caroline, Jeff, Jayne, and especially Eric, for their attentive reading.

I would like to express my gratitude to Carol Shields for her hospitality, her time, and her encouragement, and to thank Don Shields and family and the Carol Shields Literary Trust for permission to quote

This book is about home, and being away from it. I must thank my family, particularly my parents, Delia and Jack, in Canada, and my expatriate brother, Jonathan, for their generosity, their good humour, and their patience.
