Many people contributed to this text at various stages of its development. Our partners and our children provided interest and support. Carleton University gave support at various stages; in particular, Dean Marilyn Marshall provided financial support for production of the index. Vi Augustine cheerfully word-processed the text more times than any of us thought possible. Marcella Munro checked references and notes with skill and energy. Thanks go to Gaby Lévesque for compiling the index.

We must also thank the seven anonymous readers whose suggestions and insights enriched the final text. Doris Anderson, Nancy Adamson, and Anne Molgat each read the text at different stages, offering encouragement, insight, and inspiration. Our thanks go to Virgil Duff for his faith in the project and to Darlene Zeleney for her careful and insightful copy-editing of the manuscript. Thanks are also due to the Social Sciences Federation for a grant in aid of publication.

Our largest debt of thanks is owed to the many women of NAC who gave generously of their time and insight. They let us observe them, read their records, and poke and prod at their motivations. We value their trust. We are very aware that this text represents only one of many possible accounts of NAC’s political life. We hope it will provoke many more accounts to correct any misinterpretations we may have made and to flesh out the bare spots that we know remain. We also hope this account will provoke further research and analysis of women’s politics in general: It does matter!

All errors, of course, remain our responsibility, and we look forward to the process of scholarship and exploration that will enable us to correct them.
