Contents

Preface ix

PART I 1

Introduction 1

1. Weitz's Anti-essentialism 4
   Weitz's Argument 5
   Weitz's Place in the Debate 7
   Criticisms of Weitz's Argument 9

2. Functional and Procedural Definitions 23
   The Point of Concepts 26
   Concepts Defined with Respect to the Functionality of Their Instances 27
   Concepts the Instances of Which Are to Be Defined Procedurally 31
   Morals to Be Drawn from the Preceding Discussion 36
   Are Instances of Art, Artworks, to Be Defined Functionally or Procedurally? 37
   Other Approaches to the Definition of Art 47

3. Beardsley's Functionalism 50
   Beardsley's Theory 52
   The Value of the Effects of Aesthetic Experience 57
   Criticism of Beardsley's Account of Aesthetic Experience 62
   Beardsley's Formalist Leanings 64
Contents

The Main Criticism of Functionalism 66
The Functionalist's Reply 70
The Rejection of the Functionalist's Reply 73

4. Dickie's Institutional Theory of the Definition of Art 78
A Short History of the Institutional Theory 79
Dickie's Definition 83
Is Everyone Equally an Artist? 84
The Relation between the History and the Structure of the Artworld 90
Roles and Rules 97
The Isolated Artist 100
Dickie's Definition and Aesthetic Properties 107
The Circularity of Dickie's Definition 109
The Point of Art and the Institutional Definition 113

PART II 115

Introduction 115

5. The Artifactuality Condition 120
Two Kinds of Artifactuality 123
Eaton, Scalfani, and Dickie on Artifactuality 126
Iseminger's Analysis of Artifactuality 129
An Alternative Account of Artifactuality 132
Wieand, Silvers, and Wollheim on Artifactuality 133
The Views of Beardsley and Sankowski 136
Back to Dickie versus Weitz 137
The Connection with Ontology 139

6. The Indissolubility Condition 142
Wollheim and the Indissolubility of Art and Its Objects 142
Carrier on the World without Artworks 143
Scalfani on the Indissolubility Condition 151
Does Physicality Matter? 154

7. Historical and Intentional Definitions 158
Function, Symbolism, and Interpretability 160
Krukowski's Definition 164
Carroll's Narrational Theory 167
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Contents</th>
<th>vii</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Levinson's Definition</td>
<td>169</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Conclusion</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8. Artists' Intentions and the Intentional Approach</td>
<td>181</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Rejection of the Intentional Fallacy</td>
<td>182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Essentially Intentional Interpretation-Relevant Properties</td>
<td>188</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Substituting Audiences' for Artists' Intentions</td>
<td>189</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Artistic Conventions as Determinants of Aesthetic Properties</td>
<td>194</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Walton's Objection—Second-Order Intentions</td>
<td>198</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Reply to Walton's Argument</td>
<td>201</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Back to the Intentionalism's Approach to the Definition of Art</td>
<td>205</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9. Functionalism, Proceduralism, and Intentions</td>
<td>207</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Reply to Walton, Again</td>
<td>207</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feagin's View</td>
<td>211</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Finally</td>
<td>218</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>References</td>
<td>223</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Index</td>
<td>239</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>