Acknowledgments

This book could not have been written without the immaculate scholarship of Lloyd Austin, whose edition of the correspondence is such a fascinating source of information for anyone interested in fin-de-siècle thought and art. To him, and to the numerous scholars, librarians, and friends who have shared their knowledge and insights with me, I owe a great debt of gratitude. Earlier versions of certain chapters in this book were read to audiences in Toronto (Canada), Edinburgh (Scotland), Stockholm (Sweden), and Iowa City (United States), and I am grateful for the comments I received. I would also like to express my thanks to Nancy Boerner of Indiana University’s main library; Lisa Brower, Julia Simic, Saundra Taylor, and all the wonderful staff of the Lilly Library; Geneviève Moly-Averso and Marie-Anne Sarda of the Musée Mallarmé; Marie-Thérèse Stanislas, whose interest in Geneviève Mallarmé was of special help to me; Bernhard Kendler of Cornell University Press; and my colleagues and friends Jill Anderson, Mylène Catel, Mary Ann Caws, Ross Chambers, Jane Fulcher, Michael Graf, Michele Hannoosh, Bertrand Marchal, Gordon Millan, Larry Porter, and Jean-Luc Steinmetz. It’s a special pleasure to record my thanks to Jan Mitchell, who gave me invaluable help as my research assistant, and to Bill Cagle, who over many years as Lilly Librarian built up the wonderful collection of nineteenth-century French books and manuscripts housed in Bloomington’s Lilly Library.

Some of the letters from which I quote excerpts appeared in an earlier form in my Selected Letters of Stéphane Mallarmé (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1988). © 1988 by the University of Chicago. The National Endowment for the Humanities awarded me a fellowship that enabled me to devote myself full time to this project, and to them, as well as to Indiana University, which granted me a sabbatical, I am deeply grateful.

As always, my husband, Paul, deserves more thanks than I can express. Claude and Vincenette Pichois have long provided leadership and unstinting friendship to dix-neuviémistes throughout the world, and this book is a small token of appreciation for all they have given.
